PREFACE

The history of the Boston Theatre might easily be made to furnish material sufficient to fill an encyclopedia. To bring it into a single volume of this size has necessitated leaving out all criticism and practically all biography. I have tried to make the book as interesting as possible in its limited space and to prevent its becoming a mere catalogue.

The compilation of this work had its beginning in a collection of photographs made by my father, before and during the time that he was connected with the Boston Theatre. Inheriting from him a taste for such matters, I continued to collect portraits of the many celebrities who appeared there. Having been from boyhood a regular attendant at its performances and being thoroughly familiar with its happenings even before my business connection therewith, I felt the interest in its history which has found expression in this book. More fortunate than many chroniclers, I have had at hand the bound volumes of its programmes as well as the statement-books which show the receipts at all performances. To these I could add my own recollections of twenty-three years as manager and my memories of many talks with my father about the fortunes of the magnificent old playhouse.

I have also been fortunate in enlisting the services of Mr. Quincy Kilby, who has entered heart and soul into the work of collecting lacking photographs and of verifying all data.

I have tried to be accurate in all matters pertaining to dates and the spelling of names. Actors in the course of years sometimes change the spelling of their names or drop a superfluous name or initial, and actresses often marry. When such changes have appeared I have followed the wording of the programmes at the time of performance. When receipts are quoted they are absolutely correct, as I have been most particular in their verification.

In collecting the portraits I have found that everybody who could help has been willing and even anxious to do so. For the loan of rare photographs and for valuable assistance in research, I am indebted to Frank Carlos Griffith, Napier Lothian, John Bouvé Clapp, Robert Gould Shaw, E. R. Byram, Douglas Taylor of New York, Frank Dumont of Philadelphia, Joseph H. Wheeler, William H. Lee, Charles E. Redmond, Walter Baker, Frank E. Chase, Dexter Smith, Wilbor A. Shea, Edwin Warner, Lycurgus Pitman, John M. Ward, Fred L. Crocker, George B. Young, Mrs. Rachel France, W. II. Bartholomew, H. H. Kelt, Miss H. A. Bullard, Fred H. Nazro, Mrs. J. M. Barnard, Denison R. Slade, Mrs. Emma Snelling, Frank H. Robie, Mrs. C. E. Lauriat, George E. Owen, W. V. Alexander of the "Ladies' Home Journal," and Miss Agnes C. Doyle, Miss Barbara Duncan, and Edwin F. Rice of the Boston Public Library.

The Notes and Queries Department of the Boston "Transcript" has also rendered valuable service in the discovery of rare pictures and the identification of actors.

I wish to express here my gratitude to all who have so cheerfully given their time and loaned their treasures to make this work a success. I hope that the book itself may give as much pleasure to its readers as its making has given me.

THE HISTORY OF THE BOSTON THEATRE

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

The first mention in literature of the present Boston Theatre is found in "A Record of the Boston Stage," by William W. Clapp, Jr., published in 1853, in which the author quotes from a letter written to him by Thomas Barry, saying, "You will have, sooner or later, a first-class theatre in Boston, and if properly built and properly conducted, it will prove a boon to the public and a fortune to the manager."

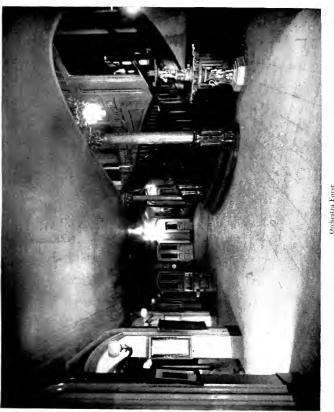

Mr. Clapp adds: "These are the prophetic words of a veteran actor and manager. May we live to see them historical facts in some future 'Record of the Stage' in Boston." Mr.

Ladies' Parlor

Barry's prediction was soon fulfilled in part, although it was many years before the theatre was a source of any considerable profit to its managers.

The Boston Theatre was opened in 1854, and was so far in advance of the times that even to-day no theatre in the world has been able to surpass it in all important particulars. In beauty of line, in acoustic properties, in ventilation, in ease and economy of heating, in generosity of entrances and lobbies, in comfort and celerity of exit, in size and capabilities of stage, it has been a model for all the large theatres that have since been constructed in this country. No other theatre in the world has presented so many notabilities to the public, from tragedians and grand opera singers to negro minstrels and variety performers, from orators and clergymen to ballet dancers and athletes. Scarcely any world-famous artist in the last fifty years has missed making his or her appearance at the Boston Theatre, and myriads of words of praise have fallen from their lips for its beauty, its comfort, and its unparalleled acoustics.

The old Boston Theatre on Federal Street was destroyed in 1852, and the Tremont Theatre having gone into the possession of a religious society, it was felt that an adequate place of amusement was needed in the city. Consequently, on April 28, 1852, a meeting which had been called by Joseph Leonard, the auctioneer, was held at the Revere House to consider the building of a new theatre. The meeting was called to order by Joseph N. Howe. E. C. Bates was chosen chairman and B. F. Stevens secretary. Addresses were made by Mayor Benjamin Seaver, Gardner

Oliver Ditson

INTRODUCTION

Brewer, and other prominent citizens, and a committee, consisting of John E. Bates, Gardner Brewer, Otis Rich, and

John E. Thayer, was appointed to select a site and solicit subscriptions. Among those who signed the petition for a charter were David Sears, Oliver Ditson, and General John S. Tyler.

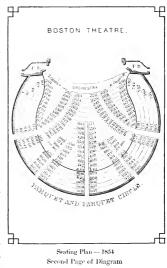

On May 15, 1852, the Boston Theatre Company was incorporated, with a capital stock of $200,000, which was afterwards increased to $250,000, the price of the shares being placed at $1000 each. The Melodeon estate on Washington Street was bought, together with the rear land, which had been owned by the Boston Gaslight Company, the total cost reaching $163.348.80.

A prize of $500 was offered for the best design of a theatre, and was won by H. Noury, the building being constructed from his design by the Boston architects, E. C. and J. E. Cabot and Jonathan Preston, the latter being appointed supervisor. The building covers 26,149 feet of land and has a present scating capacity of 3140. Comparatively few structural changes have been made in the theatre since it was built, the greatest being in 1888, when ten feet were cut from the front of the stage, thus bringing the audience so much nearer the players. In 1890 the great cut-glass chandelier was taken down and its place was filled by eight smaller electric clusters, thus removing all danger of accident from the fall of the whole or a part of the massive structure, a danger far more apparent than real, yet still within the bounds of possibility. This chandelier was of immense size and weight, and was composed of thousands of cut-glass prisms. When lighted, it had the appearance of a great glowing jewel, and was the admiration and delight of generations of theatre-goers. A strange comment on the uncertainty of fashion is furnished by the fact that when this chandelier, which had cost thousands of dollars, was taken down, nobody could be found to purchase it, or even to remove it for the value of the material of which it was composed. It was dismantled and stored above the dome of the theatre, where it now lies, neglected and forgotten, within a few feet of the scene of its long-time glory.

The construction of the dome was a work of genius in a work of gents in engineering, as it was a serious problem to carry so large an expanse of ceiling without help from below. It was here that wire lathing was used for the first time on record, as it was not practicable to sustain so great an area of plastering with ordinary wooden laths.

The paneled clock over the proseenium was unique in its novelty, and is still the only one of the kind in this country, though its counterpart may be seen at the Hoftheater in Dresden, Saxony.

The staircase which leads from the Washington Street lobby to the upper gallery is ingeniously contrived to be self-supporting and in no way dependent upon the walls beside it, but springing free and clear from the basement below. Its integrity is shown in the fact that in all its more than fifty years of service it has borne its burden of millions of hurrying human beings without a crack or strain of any kind. It is spiral in form and measures nine feet in width, being constructed of oak, which even now shows but few signs of wear from the countless feet that have trodden its broad surfaces. The grand staircase leading from the main lobby to the first balcony also shows the excellence of its material, there being practically no appearance of wear after its half-century of faithful service.

The ladies' room on the first floor, the smoking-room on the second floor, and the spacious lobbies of the family circle and gallery occupy in themselves an area greater than the entire auditorium of many a smaller theatre. Although the seating capacity of the house is so much larger than that of any other in the city, it is a pleasing fact that the sign "Standing Room Only" has been shown oftener in the Boston Theatre than in any other local playhouse.

The auditorium is ninety feet in diameter and is almost circular in shape, flattening slightly towards the stage. The distance from the curtain to the back of the auditorium is eighty-four feet. The height of the dome is fifty-four feet. The four private boxes on either side of the auditorium should be considered principally as an architectural feature, as they were intentionally kept in the background, that they might not interfere with the view from the orchestra circle or balconies.

The stage backs on Mason Street, where are the stage-door for the use of actors and working staff, and the great scenedoors, which have height enough to admit the largest pieces of seenery and sufficient width to permit the passage of tally-ho coaches, fire-engines, or the bulkiest properties that may be needed. The proscenium opening is forty-eight feet in width by forty-one in height. There is a sub-cellar beneath the stage with a depth of about thirty feet, which allows the sinking of the highest flats and wings. The stage itself is irregular in shape, being much deeper on the side toward the south. Its capabilities are known the world over, and it has been since its first construction a standard for commodiousness and mechanical perfection.

In addition to the actors, singers, and performers in all other branches of the amusement profession who have been seen here, an army of supernumeraries has trodden its boards, thousands of whom have gained name and fame in divers fields of usefulness. Comparatively few are the students of Harvard College, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and many kindred institutions, who have not appeared at least once before a Boston Theatre audience as one of the villagers, soldiery, or mob in the great operatic, spectacular, and melodramatic productions for which the theatre has long been famous. A large proportion of the prominent citizens of nearby Massachusetts eities has also been seen there serving as members of reception committees, seated behind some famous orator or statesman, as he addressed his audience on an absorbing topic of the day. The little stage-door on Mason Street could conjure up a procession of ghostly visitors of other days, unequaled by the shadows from any other such portal in the world. Well might W. E. Henley's lines be inscribed above it:

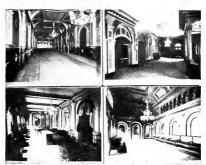

> The curtain falls, the play is played; The beggar packs beside the beau;

THE FIRST NIGHT

THOMAS BARRY took a trip to Europe in the early part of 1854 in the interest of the Boston Theatre. While there he wrote the following letters to J. B. Wright. These letters are now in the possession of Robert Gould Shaw of this city, who has kindly loaned them for reproduction in this book.

43 St. James's Place, St. James's Street, London, May 19, 1854.

My dear Wright, — I returned from Paris last night, having been absent nine days. Prior to my departure I engaged Mr. Wood for the first low comedy and his wife for the chambermaids. They are both young and clever, great favorites, and considered equal to any artists on the English stage. When I told Webster of the engagement he expressed his surprise at their going to America, and said that he had intended offering them terms for the Adelphi.

Finding the price here asked for theatrical dresses fifty per cent more than I had expected, I determined to make the wardrobe up in America and asked Brooke to spare me Howell as our costumer. He consented, and Howell is engaged for that business and likewise to act and assist on the stage as may be required. Johnson and Howell must work together amicably.

In Paris I was offered the wardrobe belonging to the Strasburg Theatre at a very low price, and purchased it. Many of the costumes are of silk velvet, scarcely worn, and made by the great costumer of Paris, Nounon. I likewise bought a fine

Description of the Control of the Co

Programme of the Opening Night

Theatricals are dull in Paris, and the glory of the French stage appears to have set without the hope of a speedy rising. There is no startling talent to be met with, the actresses are plain, almost ugly, the ballet indifferent, and I see nothing superior to our own stage except the scenery, gorgeous costumes, and instrumental music, which is perfection.

During the course of the coming week I shall probably make some engagements. Do not write to me after the 3d of June, as I shall sail from Liverpool on the 17th. I wish the day was come, for I long to be home again. I went on board the Africa a sick man, and sickness has stuck to me more or less ever since. The weather here is dreadful, a cold rain, no sun, more like a New York winter than anything else.

I crossed the English Channel in a gale of wind, the sea breaking over our little iron steamer and drenching the passengers to the skin. Let others travel for pleasure. I have had enough of it. My best thanks for your attention to business. Act as for yourself; whatever you do is right. With best wishes, believe me but I understand he has no news to communicate. Our wardrobe will be first-rate, the most beautiful and complete in America. The costumes making here are perfect.

business in the country and is a very good actress. The youngest is to do anything. Both can sing and are pretty. The father was for years the first old man at York and can play Irishmen, etc. He is to make himself useful in second old men and respectable business. His wife (his second) is quite a young and handsome woman and plays chambermaids. She is to make herself useful. They have four

As the day for my departure approaches, business accumulates and I have only time to write a few lines. My best respects to Mrs. W., your mother, and all friends.

Very truly yours,

THOMAS BARRY.

The family referred to was the Biddles family, and the young and pretty girl of 17 who was to do anything became

Mrs. Thomas Barry before very long. Although not in the first production, she was present on that occasion and occupied a seat in Mr. Barry's private box.

The opening night was a great success, the auditorium being crowded with a throng representing the brains, wealth, and fashion of the city. It was an occasion which it would be impossible to duplicate in these later days, for no one building could hold so large a proportion of all that is so absolutely the best of the community. The audience was kindly and enthusiastic, and the star of success shone brightly over the new enterprise.

A copy of the opening programme is shown on page 15. The box-office statement for that evening shows the following receipts:

Free tickets: Dr. Wyman, 6; Judges, 6; Dr. Parsons, 2; Corporation, 12; Press, 24; others, 14: total, 64. There were 2915 people in the theatre, the gallery not being entirely filled. The stockholders had the privilege of free admission to the theatre at all times, excepting to the stage, dressing-rooms, and offices, or, in lieu of admission, two seats reserved in any part of the theatre, the price not to exceed one dollar each, and the tickets to be called for before ten o'clock in the morning on the day of performance.

The Mr. Comer who played Sir Lucius O'Trigger in "The Rivals" was Thomas Comer, the musical director, who thus set an example which was later followed by Napier Lothian, who left the leader's desk to appear as principal support to Maggie Mitchell and to Lotta on the occasion of his benefits, and who once saved a performance by substituting at short notice for Louis James as Captain Molyneux in "The Shaughraun," in support of Dion Boucicault.

The one single individual who was connected with this performance and with the anniversary performance fifty years later was August Suck, who played the violoncello in the orchestra. On his way to rehearsal on the morning of September 11, 1854, he stopped at a photographer's and had his picture taken. That picture is herewith reproduced, together with one showing him as he looked fifty years later.

Miss Clara Biddles, who became the wife of Mr. Thomas

Barry, was in after-years the leading lady of the theatre. Some time after Mr. Barry's death she married William Redmund, who was the leading man of the theatre for the seasons of 1881–82, 1882–83, and 1883–84. She died in New York in 1906 and was buried in the family lot in Boston.

The Prize Address, which was recited by John Gilbert, — he thus having the honor of speaking the first lines from the Boston Theatre stage, proved to have been written by Thomas W. Parsons, a poet best known by his translation of Dante's works.

The prize was one hundred dollars. The address was in the form of an ode in ten-syllable metre, and concluded as follows:

"Such rites have been where now this temple stands. The savage dramas of the Indian bands.

Near the blue lake and by the midnight fire,
See the red artist and the naked choir.

When the great sachem with his Pequot court,
After the fray, assembled at the sport.

See — 't was but yesterday — their dance describe.

The hunt, the fray, the triumph of their tribe.

These too were artists, but their show is done:
Their last spectator was the setting sun.

THE FIRST NIGHT

"In Charles's days, when tragedy was mean.
Once the light muse went slipshod on the scene.
Was Charles alone at fault? Historian tell.
We love the sturdy Puritan too well.
What though the drama drooped beneath his ban,
Spite of the bigot, we revere the man.
What though he left polluted arts behind,
He brought his sword, his Bible and his mind.

"Something of that austerity be yours, Since Folly loves what easy Taste endures. Let our purged altar and its blameless priest Honor the three-hilled city of the East, That to the wise our theatre may seem A nobler school, a loftier Academe. And Shakespeare's mine, transplanted to the shore Whose rocks are gold, whose sands are shining ore (Or far as Freedom's onward march may draw Arts, without arms, and without conquest, Law), A sacred well, from whose o'erflowing brink Each generation in its turn may drink. So shall your children thank you, not alone For wealth of empire grasping every zone, But write these words on Memory's grateful page: Sons of the Pilgrims, you redeemed our stage."

Mr. Parsons's work was enthusiastically praised, one critic going so far as to say that it was the best of all his poems. An interesting contrast to the ode is found in a pamphlet issued in the autumn of 1854, bearing the imprint of John P. Jewett & Company, who are best remembered as the original publishers of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The title-page of the pamphlet reads:

THE LOVE OF PLEASURE.

OPENING OF A NEW THEATRE IN BOSTON.

DELIVERED IN MT. VERNON CHURCH, SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 10, 1854,

BY EDWARD N. KIRK.

DI EDWARD N. KIKK

Published in accordance with the wishes of the Mt. Vernon Association of Young Men.

The preface tells that the sermon was repeated on the following Sunday by request, and with the pastor's consent was issued to the public as a Sermon for the Times. The principal part of the discourse is directed against pleasure in general, the clergyman saying, "It is evil to seek pleasure in anything rather than in God, more than in Him." Later he says, though this part of the sermon was evidently delivered on the second Sunday:

"One manager recently promised his audience, in opening a new playhouse, that those beautiful walls should be polluted by no vulgarity or profaneness; and yet 1 find one of the plays enacted that very evening sprinkled with many genteel oaths; besides one sufficiently vulgar. You would think from the prize essay then read that we were going to have a Puritan theatre here, to which Cotton Mather himself and Elder Brewster might consistently go. But, alas! what an entertainment to begin our improving theatricals with, 'The Loan of a Lover,' The Rivals,' two silly, coarse exhibitions of that affection which lies at the bottom of all domestic happiness, and of the stability of the Commonwealth. No, Bostonians, this kind of entertainment becomes neither you, your origin, your history, your position, nor the age of the world. It is not amusement we want, while life presents such serious duties, and destiny is so near. The silly Athenians were amusing themselves while demagogues were bartering their liberties, and Philip was forging their chains. Slavery alone is making serious work enough for us. Annexation is hurrying our country to the edge of a whirlpool. Is this a time for luxurious playhouses and silly comedies? Shame, sons of the Pilgrims, heirs of American institutions, formers of American destiny! It is not amusement we want; but something infinitely higher. I know that respectable citizens sanction the movement. But I take my stand on history, common sense, and Scripture; and say, it is a serious evil to any community. It will fortify sin, augment crime, multiply wretchedness, lower the tone of morals, and hinder the progress of Christianity. You have opened a splendid suite of rooms. But they will, in all probability, prove a splendid pitfall for some of our beloved young men. Merchants have said, 'It is necessary to our trade; we must draw traders to our city.' But what will they think if they pay for that trade with the ruined characters of young men in their employment? If this is so important a part of the commercial apparatus of our city, then our young merchants must naturally patronize it. If the master esteems it so highly, the apprentice must visit it. But the history of these costly entertainments shows that, next to gambling-houses, theatres have furnished the strongest temptations to dishonesty in clerks."

THE SEASON OF 1854-55

The stock company filled the first four weeks of the season, their offerings being "The Rivals," "The Loan of a Lover," "The Wonder," "Mr. and Mrs. Peter White," "The Love Chase," "The Merchant of Venice," "The Swiss Cottage," "John Bull," "A New Way to Pay Old Debts," "The Poor Gentleman," "The Wandering Minstrel," "Virginius," "The Two Gregories," "A Kiss in the Dark," and "Man and Wife." J. B. Howe and Messrs. Biddles and Lyster made their début in "The Wonder," on Wednesday, September 13. Adelaide Biddles and Messrs. Forrester and Morris were first seen on Friday, the 15th, while James Bennett did not appear until Monday, September 18, when he played Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice."

At first the theatre was open only on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings, it being against the law to give performances on Saturday evenings, on account of the Puritan Sabbath's beginning at sundown on Saturday. The first matinee was that of "Man and Wife" and "Mr. and Mrs. Peter White" on October 7, after which they became general, although when Edwin Forrest came that season he played only at the evening performances, the matinees being given by the stock company. There were four dramatic stars this season, Julia Dean, Edwin Forrest, James H. Hackett, and E. L. Davenport, all of whom chanced to be Americans, while Mr. Davenport was of Boston birth.

Julia Dean was the first star, opening on October 9, and remaining four weeks, in "The

Julia Dean

Hunchback," "The Lady of Lyons," "The Wife," "The Love Chase," "Love," "The Stranger," "Evadne," "The Honeymoon," "The Gamester," "Romeo and Juliet," "Ingomar," and "The Follies of a Night." The company always played an afterpiece in addition to the star's offering. Edwin Forrest followed on November 6, opening in "Richelieu" and remaining three weeks, during which time he was seen in

"Damon and Pythias," "A New Way to Pay Old Debts," "Virginius," "King Lear," "Othello," "The Gladiator," "Metamora," "Jack Cade," and "Hamlet," During Mr.
Forrest's engagement John Gilbert was not in any of the casts. The following letter, loaned by Robert Gould Shaw, gives some light on the subject:

Baltimore, December 17, 1854.

MY DEAR MR. BARRY, — From the expression which you used to me while I had the pleasure to be with you last in Boston, I inferred that you could not justify my conduct towards Mr. Gilbert in refusing him permission to act with me during my late engagement there. When I briefly replied to your expression I supposed I had answered your objections. But thinking the matter over since, I am not so certain that I had convinced you of my undeniable right to pursue the course I then adopted, so I will now state more fully my views of the question.

It is an axiom that a man in a state of liberty may choose his own associates and if he find one to be treacherous and unworthy he may discard him. Therefore I discard Mr. Gilbert. Again, I never believed in the hypocrisy which tells us to love one's enemies. My religion is to love the good and eschew the evil. Therefore I eschew Mr. Gilbert. Physical cowardice may be forgiven, but I never forgave a moral coward, and therefore I forgive not Mr. Gilbert. He who insists on associating, professionally or otherwise, with another known to despise him, is a wretch unworthy the name of man. Consequently Mr. Gilbert is unworthy the name of man.

But, sir, besides all this I have an undisputable right to choose from the company such actors as I consider will render me the most agreeable as well as the most efficient support.

In my rejection of Mr. Gilbert I took the earliest care not to jeopardize any of the interests of your theatre, for I advised you in ample time of my resolution, warning you of my intentions and giving my reasons therefor, so that you might choose between the services of Mr. Gilbert and my own. For while I claim the right in these matters to choose for myself, I unhesitatingly concede the same right to another.

And now if after this expression of my views relative to this thing, you still hold to the opinion that my conduct was unjustifiable, you cannot with the slightest propriety ask me to fulfil another engagement so long as Mr. Gilbert remains in your company, for I pledge you my word as a man that he shall never under any circumstances act with me again.

Yours truly,

THOS. BARRY, Esq.

EDWIN FORREST.

Mr. Forrest's hatred of Mr. Gilbert is supposed to have been caused by the fact that when Catherine Sinclair Forrest obtained the decision in her favor in the Forrest divorce suit. Mr. Gilbert publicly said that he was glad of it.

The first opera company to visit the Boston Theatre was an English Opera Company headed by Louisa Pyne, Miss Pyne,

W. Harrison, Borrani, Whiting, Reeves, and Meyer, who opened on November 27, 1854, in Auber's Comic Opera, "Crown Diamonds," then heard for the first time in Boston. This ran the entire week and was followed by two more weeks of "Maritana," "La Sonnambula," "The Boenian Girl," "Fra Diavolo," and "The Beggar's Opera." The regular company assisted in the smaller parts in these operas and also played a farce each evening.

The step pany filled the fortnight beginning December 18 with "The Merry Wives of Windsor" (John Gilbert as Falstaff), "Hamlet" (James Bennett as Hamlet), "The School for Scandal," "Money," "The Merchant of Venice" (James Bennett as Shylock), and "Richard HI" (James Bennett as Richard and Mrs. H. P. Grattan as Queen Elizabeth). Farces were played every evening also.

E. L. Davenport began a starring engagement on January 1, 1855, his plays being "Hamlet," "Othello," "St.

E. L. Davenport as Hamlet

Marc," "The Stranger," "Richard III," "Brutus," and

"Black-Eyed Susan." In the latter piece he sang "A Yankee Ship and a Yankee Crew," and in conjunction with Adelaide Biddles danced a double sailor's hornpipe. For his benefit on Friday, January 12, he played "The Wife," "The Morning Call," and "Black-Eyed Susan."

The first Italian Opera Company in the theatre was that headed by Madame Grisi and Signor Mario, who were supported by Signorina Donovani, Susimi, Badiali, Lorini, and others. Arditi was the conductor, Amati Dubreuil the stage-manager, and Soto, Ciocca, and G. W. Smith led the ballet. The opera company sang only on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday nights and Saturday matinees, the stock company filling the Tuesday and Thursday evenings. "I Puritani" was the first Italian opera to be heard, being followed by "Lucrezia Borgia," "La Favorita," "The Barber of Seville," "Norma," "Don Pasquale," "Don Giovanni," and "Semiramide."

E. L. Davenport

James H. Haekett played Falstaff in "Henry IV" on January 30 and February 6, and the same character in "The Merry Wives of Windsor" on February 1. He was also seen in "The Kentuckians" and "Monsieur Mallet" on February 8.

This opera company opened on January 15 and remained four weeks, being followed on Monday, February 12, by a spectacular production of "The Invisible Prince, or the Island of Tranquil Delights," which ran, with some interruptions, for five weeks.

J.H. Hackett as Falstaff During its run benefits were given to Mrs.

Barrow, Mrs. John Wood.

Mr. Bennett, Mr. Pauncefort, and Mr. Gilbert. Mrs. Hudson Kirby of the stock company made her first appearance in America on Monday, March 5, 1855, in the part of Julia in "The Hunehback," Mrs. Barrow being the Helen.

Julia Dean, who had now become Mrs. Julia Hayne, opened on March 19 in "The Wife," playing "The Lady of Lyons" on Tuesday, while on Wednesday she produced "The Priestess," a new five-act tragedy, written for this theatre by a "Popular and Successful American Author." This was played on

W. Harrison

J. H HACKETT.

Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, and all the next week. The performance of Friday, March 23, was for the author's benefit, but we are not told who the author was.

The stock company filled the next two weeks, beginning April 2, and "The Priestess" was revived on April 5 and 6, with Mrs. Hudson Kirby in the star rôle of Norma.

Julia Hayne had a farewell benefit on Monday, April 9, when she was seen in "The Jealous Wife" and "The Honeymoon."

A "Norma Travestie" was presented on April 11, 12, and 13, with John Gilbert as Norma.

The Pyne and Harrison English Opera Company returned on April 16 and remained three weeks, presenting the operas of "Cinderella," "The Beggar's Opera," "Guy Mannering," "La Sonnambula," "Fra Diavolo," "The Bohemian Girl," and "Crown Diamonds."

The stock company filled the next two weeks, beginning May 7, with "Rule a Wife and Have a Wife," "The Bridal," "The Jealous Wife," "The Priestess," "Henry IV," "The Invisible Prince,"

Amodio

"King John," "As You Like it," "Twelfth Night," "Wild Oats," "The King and the Mimic," and various farces.

An Italian Opera Company opened on May 21 and stayed three weeks, the principals being Steffenone, Vestvali, Bertucca-Maretzek, Brignoli, Badiali, Coletti, Amodio, and Rocco. The opening bill was "William Tell," for the first time in Boston, the other operas being "Lucrezia Borgia," "Il

Jerome, Antoine, and Gabriel Ravel

Trovatore," "Lucia di Lammermoor," and "Rigoletto." On the afternoon of May 9, "Masaniello" was given, with the last scene of "Lucia," Mlle. Zoe making her first appearance in the city as the dumb girl in the former piece, while Harrison Millard also made his first appearance here as Edgardo, in the latter opera.

Niblo's Celebrated Ravel

Troupe made their first appearance on Tuesday, June 5, 1855, the principals being François Ravel, Blondin the tightrope walker, Paul Brilliant, Maugin, Marzetti, Thilman, Axel, Ione, Mme. Marzetti, Victorine Franck, Mlles, Thilman, Axel, Cherini, Gilbert, and Flora, Julie, Anna, and Caroline Lehman. Their opening bill was "The Green Monster" and "Soldier for Love." Appearing at first on the off-nights of the opera, they afterward filled all the time from June 12 to July 5, their pantomimes including "Le Diable Amoureux," in which Yrea Mathias made her début, "Robert Ma-caire," "Raoul, or the Magic Star," "Genevieve," "M. Dechalumeau," "Jeannette and Jeannot," "Godenski," "La Prima Donna," "Medina," "The Isle of Nymphs," and "The Magic Flute."

A single performance of opera was given on Monday, June 18, 1855, when "Norma" and the finale to "Lucia" were sung by Anna de la Grange, Signora Seidenburg, Raffaelle Mirati, Morelli, Barattini, and Madame Morra. Arditi was the conductor.

At the Washington Street entrance of the theatre the outside door was originally constructed to slide up and down in grooves at the sides. Being very heavy, it was counterweighted so that it might be easily raised. On the opening night it stuck fast when about four feet above the threshold, and could be moved neither up nor down, in consequence of which all early comers were obliged to stoop low and enter in a most undignified position. Before the evening was over, however, the trouble was corrected and the later arrivals entered with their normal erectness. On Thursday, January 11, 1855, this door being again out of order, the counterweights were removed and the door was supported by a piece of joist while the necessary repairs were being made. A curious onlooker, despite an emphatic warning, leaned against the supporting timber and knocked it down, causing the heavy door to fall upon him, killing him instantly. Mr. Barry mentions this fact in the statement book which he kept, which book is in the possession of Mrs. Whitcomb, a daughter of Mr. Barry, who is still a resident of Boston. Mr. Barry also notes that on Monday, May 28, 1855, there was a mass meeting at Fancuil Hall, ten thousand persons being present. This apparently had no ill effect upon the business of the theatre, as the opera company sang "Il Trovatore" on that evening to the largest house of its engagement, the receipts being $1369.50.

On Wednesday, July 4, 1855, it was very hot, a circus was exhibiting in town, and there were fireworks on the Common, making a combination which had a disastrous effect on business, the Ravels playing that night to $189. The largest receipts for a single night that season were drawn by the Italian opera company of which Grisi and Mario were the stars. The date was Monday, January 22, the opera was "Norma," and the receipts were $4225.

On the latter date the regular company played "Wives as They Were and Maids as They Are." She appeared again on Thursday, November 1, as Adrienne and on Friday she played "Virginie" and sang "La Marseillaise." The prices for this engagement were one, two, and three dollars a seat, and the receipts for the eight performances footed up $28,090, an average of over $3500 per performance. At the foot of the programmes were the following notes:

"Notice. The Management disclaims all connection with Speculators who sell Tickets with a premium, and especially with an office of the kind established in the same house as his office.

"Notice. The Lessee respectfully announces that having relinquished all interest in and control of the Theatre during the Performances of Mile. Rachel, the admissions thereto, during that brief period, are under the control of Monsieur Raphael Félix, absolutely."

Edwin Forrest came on November 5 for four weeks in his tragic repertory. John Gilbert did not appear in Mr. Forrest's plays or in the accompanying afterpieces during this engagement, but did appear in the bill at the Saturday matinee, December 1, the first performance after Mr. Forrest had concluded his engagement.

Adelaide Phillips made her first appearance after her return from Italy on December 2 and remained that week, singing in "The Devil's Bridge," "The Duenna," and "The Cabinet," the other parts in these pieces being assumed by members of the stock company. At her benefit on December 7, 1855, she was also seen in the last act of "Giulietta e Romeo," Mrs. John Wood singing Juliet to her Romeo. Miss Phillips had heretofore been known to the public as a dancer.

The company filled the weeks of December 10 and 17 with various comedies, John Gilbert and Thomas Barry having benefits during that time. "The Tempes

Elise Hensler made her first appearance on January 25, 1856, in "Linda di Chamouni." She was a Boston girl who was born in 1836, her father being a merchant tailor named Conrad Hensler, who lived at 32 Carver Street. After two years' study in Paris and Milan, 1853–55, she made her American début in 1855 at the Academy of Music, New York, with Madame La Grange. In the sixties she sang at the

Joseph Proctor

Opera House in Lisbon with great success. Her mother was her constant companion. King Don Fernando (grandfather of King Carlos, who was assassinated in 1908, and first cousin to Queen Victoria of England and her husband, Prince Albert) met Miss Hensler at a musicale in Lisbon and soon after married her for his second wife on June 10, 1869, in the Royal Chapel of Pena Castle, Cintra. Before her marriage the title of Countess of Edla was conferred upon her by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, brother of Don Fernando, her name at once appearing in the Almanach de Gotha. Her only sister married Doctor Daniel Denison Slade (Harvard College, 1844). Elise, now a widow, lives in Lisbon, beloved and respected by all. (This sketch of Miss Hensler's life was contributed by her nephew, Denison R. Slade.)

Joseph Proctor was seen in his repertoire of tragic rôles on the off-nights of the opera.

W. M. Fleming, late manager of the National Theatre, had a benefit on February 12, when he was seen as Shylock and Dandy Dinmont, Mrs. Fleming assuming the rôle of Nerissa.

Wyzeman Marshall appeared for the week of February 25 in "Zafari," a play by Dr. J. S. Jones, which then had its first presentation on any stage. During the next week Mr. Marshall played "Hamlet," "Pizarro," "Julius Cæsar," and "Macbeth."

On Monday, March 10, "Olympia," written for Mrs. Barrow by a gentleman of this city, had its première. "After which, Mrs. Barrow, by desire and by permission of the author, will illustrate in Indian costume portions of Professor Longfellow's celebrated poem of Hiawatha."

At Mrs. Hudson Kirby's benefit on March 24, James Bennett made his reappearance as St. Pierre in "The Wife."

"It Is Ill Playing with Edged Tools," by "a gentleman well known in the literary world," was produced March 31 and ran two weeks, with the exception of two or three performances.

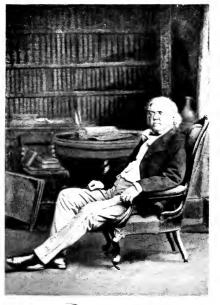

A spectacular production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" was made on April 14, with the following cast:

Theseus H. F. Daly. Mr. Belton Lysander Demetrius Mr. Stoddart. Mr. Cowell. Egeus Philostrate N. T. Davenport. Hippolyta Mrs. Belton. Helena Mrs. Hudson Kirby. Hermia Adelaide Biddles. Nick Bottom John Gilbert. Flute John Wood Quince W. H. Curtis. S. D. Johnson. Snug T. E. Morris. Snout Starveling Mr Holmes Oberon Mrs. Barrow. Titania Emma Taylor. Puck Mrs. John Wood. Clara Biddles. The Fairy

"A Midsummer Night's Dream" ran with interruptions until May 30. On Wednesday, May 14, Adelaide Biddles had a farewell benefit, prior to her return to Europe.

The Vestvali Italian Opera Troupe was seen on June 4 and 6 and the afternoon of the 7th in programmes which included concert numbers, with acts from "II Trovatore." "Ernani," and "Montecchi e Capuletti." The principals consisted of Vestvali, Constanza Manzini, Ceresa, Barili, and Nune. The same company gave "Ernani" on June 11, and "II Trovatore" on the 16th and 18th, while on the 19th was presented a mixed bill made up of acts from "Ernani," "Lucia," "Romeo and Juliet," and "Il Barbiere di Seviglia." This closed the season.

Thackeruy in 1862'

Mr. Barry's notes during the season make interesting reading. He says that on Tuesday, September 11, 1855, Barnum's Baby-Show opened at Music

Hall and continued the remainder of the week to astonishing business. Seventeen thousand persons paid for admission on Wednesday and the receipts continued to increase after that. This seriously affected business at all the theatres throughout the city. On Friday, October 5, Barney Williams took a benefit, having for opposition benefits at the Museum, Howard, and National. When Adelaide Phillips had her benefit, on December 7, 1855, the famous author, William Makepeace Thackeray, was lecturing in the Melodeon next door to a crowded house. When Mr. Barry's own benefit came off, his opposition was E. F. Keach's benefit at the Museum, another lecture by Thackeray, and a concert, the date being Friday, December 21. In these modern days no manager would ever dream of taking a benefit in the week before Christmas, as that is in Boston the worst week of the season.

Vestvali

CHAPTER V

THE SEASON OF 1856-57

The company for the season of 1856–57 remained practically the same. William Ellison became the treasurer and Jacob T. Johnson the machinist. "A Midsummer Night's Dream" opened the season on September 3 and was played all of that week. During the week of September 15 "The Tempest," "Old Heads and Young Hearts," and "Much Ado About Nothing" were played.

At the Franklin Celebration on Wednesday, September 17, 1856, "The Tempest" and "The Young Widow" were given, together with a "Tribute to Franklin, with new scenery by Mr. Hayes, assisted by Mr. Selwin, representing the house in which Franklin was born and the Franklin Statue in front of the City Hall." An address, written for the occasion, was spoken by Mrs. Barrow. The Ames Manufacturing Company, by invitation, visited the theatre that evening.

Tom Taylor's "Retribution" had its first representation in America on September 22, and continued through the week. "The Marble Heart" filled the week of September 29, being seen for the first times in Boston.

Beny Franklin

Edwin Forrest

Miss Davenport was the first star of the season. She is supposed to have suggested as a child the character of the Infant

La Grange

Phenomenon in Dickens's novel of "Nicholas Nickleby." She afterward became Mrs. Lander and was a prominent star for years. On this occasion she opened on October 6 in "Love," her other plays being "The Maid of Mariendorpt," "The Lady of Lyons," "The Hunchback," "Adrienne, the Actress," "Camille," and "Mona Lisa." She remained two weeks.

October 20 for three weeks, the chief artists being La Grange, Adelaide Phillips, Bertucca Maretzek, Brignoli, Amodio, Coletti, Ceresa, Taffanelli, Barattina, and Miss S. Pyne. During this engagement "The North Star" was heard for the first times in Boston and had three representations.

Edwin Forrest began a five weeks' stay on November 10. John Gilbert did not appear in the plays with Mr. Forrest, but did perform in the afterpieces the same evenings, notably a farce called "John Gilbert and His Daughter," written by W. W. Clapp, Jr., in which he personated John Gilbert, "a retired actor." W. H. Curtis was "an actor still in harness," and Mrs. Barrow was Julia Gilbert, "for this night only, and by kind permission of J. G." During Mr. Forrest's stay "William Tell" was presented for the first time in this theatre and ran an entire week.

For Mrs. John Wood's benefit, on February 13 and 14, an "Atrocious Outrage" called "Hiawatha, or Ardent Spirits and Three benefits occurred during the week of February 16, to Mr. and Mrs. John Gilbert, to W. A. Donaldson, and to Mrs. Hudson Kirby.

Mrs. McMahon played a starring engagement of one week, beginning February 23, in "The Hunehback," "The School for Scandal," "Romeo and Juliet," "Fazio," and "The Lady of Lyons." Mrs.

Hudson Kirby was seen as Romeo to Mrs. McMahon's Juliet.

The stock company filled the week of March 2 with comedies, several benefits taking place during the week.

Agnes Robertson and Dion Bourcicault (who afterward discarded the r in Bourcicault) began a three weeks' season on March 9 in "The Life of an Actress." They also presented "The Phantom," "The Young Actress," "Bob Nettles,"

"Andy Blake," "Bluebelle," "Pauline," "The Little Treasure," "The Chameleon," and "Used

Up."

The stock company presented "Ruth Oakley" on March 30 and 31.

German opera, under the direction of Carl Bergmann, with Theodore Thomas as conductor, opened on April 1, playing only three times, Wednesday and Friday nights and Saturday matinee. The principals were Mme. Johannsen, Mme. Von Berkel, Weinlich, Reutler, and Ochrlein. The Orpheus Club, under Mr. Kreissmann, volunteered their services. "Fidelio" was given entire—its first time in Boston—and acts were given from "Der Freischütz." "Czar and Carpenter," and "Mason and Locksmith."

George Vandenhoff opened on April 6 for an engagement of one week, presenting "Henry V," "Hamlet," and "Macbeth," On Saturday afternoon he played John Mildmay in "Still Waters Run Deep," and also, in the costume of Apollo, recited Collins's "Ode to the Passions," with "Statuesque Illustrations of Fear, Anger, Love, Jealousy, Hope, Despair, and Joy." John Wood and Wil-

Edwin Booth's first Boston appearance as a star was made on April 20, 1857, he being then not yet twenty-four years old. He opened in "A New Way to Pay Old Debts" and remained two weeks, presenting also "Riehelieu," "Richard III," "The Apostate," "Bertram," "Little Tod-

On Thursday, May 21, 1857, Mr. Barry made the following note: "Nigger Slaves at the Melodeon played to $200. They are not slaves. Query: White men with black, etc.?"

The theatrieal contracts of those days make interesting reading. The following is a copy of one, to which the rules of the theatre are appended as a part of the agreement:

CHAPTER VI

THE SEASON OF 1857-58

The season of 1857-58 found the Boston Theatre in shoal waters. The great panic of 1857 occurred during September and October of that year. Disaster was everywhere, and the whole country seemed on the verge of ruin. Mr. Barry's comments at the time are particularly interesting:

Monday, September 28, 1857. Great Panic. Failures for Millions.

Tuesday, 29. Panic oceasioning more failures.

Wednesday, 30. Still more failures.

Thursday, October 1. Day of consternation. More failures.

Monday, October 5. Unprecedented financial crisis this.

Banks suspended.

Tuesday, 6th. Great panic in New York. Great failures in Boston and New York.

Thursday, 8th. Lola Montez lectured at the Melodeon. Receipts, $225.

Saturday, 10th. A week of ruin to merchants.

Monday, 12th. Great panie in New York.

Tuesday. 13th. New York banks suspended.

Wednesday, 14th. Boston banks suspended. Great instrumental concert in the Melodeon a failure; the others put off.

Thursday, 15th. Great political meetings at night.

At the opening of the season the prices were lowered to suit the times, the first floor and balcony seats being sold at fifty cents, second balcony twenty-five cents, and gallery fifteen cents.

The season opened on Monday, September 7, with the following company: George Vandenhoff, Charles Pope, John Gilbert, William Dayidge, George H. Andrews, J. B. Howe, W. A. Donaldson, W. H. Curtis, S. D. Johnson, Cowell, Holmes, Selwin, G. Letter," written expressly for this occasion by G. H. Andrews, Mrs. Abbott being the Hester Prynne. Mr. Andrews did not play in the piece, but was seen in the farce of "Wanted, 1000 Milliners," as Joe Baggs and Madame Vanderpants. "The Scarlet Letter" was played but two nights and was followed by "The Money Panic of '57," an adaptation of "Les Pauvres de Paris," the French original from which "The Streets of New York" was taken by Dion Boucicault. William Davidge impersonated Dick Tatters, the part which Frank Mayo afterward played under the title of Badger. Despite the play's timeliness it failed to draw, the receipts on New Year's Eve being but $85.05.

Matilda Heron began a fortnight's season on January 4, 1858, her offerings being "The Maid's Tragedy," "Camille,"

Gabriel Ravel

"Medea," "Phædra," "Fazio," "Vice and Virtue," "Masks and Faces," and "Leonore."

play. The season for the stock company came to an end on May 7.

Charlotte Cushman began on May 31 a fortnight's engagement "prior to her return to Europe and her Final Retirement from the Stage." (She continued to retire from the stage for eighteen years after that.) E. L. Davenport played the leading parts with her and the following players made their first professional appearances in this city: Mary Devlin, — who afterward married Edwin Booth, — L. R. Shewell, G. C. Boniface, Dan Setchell, James Dunn, Collier, Walters, and Bishop, while Anna Cruise made her first appearance in this theatre. The plays were "Henry VIII," "Macbeth," "Romeo and Juliet," with Charlotte Cushman as Romeo and Mary Devlin as Juliet, "Guy Mannering," "The Stranger," "The Actress of Padua," and "She Stoops to Conquer."

The theatre was closed for a week and the Ronzani Ballet Troupe filled the week of June 21, thus closing a season that was notable for the fact that there had been not one performance of opera within the year.

THE SEASON OF 1858-59

ONTINUED bad business, caused by the panic of 1857, had so U evil an effect on the finances of the Boston Theatre that in the autumn of 1858 the corporation succumbed to the inevitable and gave up the ghost. The old company was entirely wiped out and a new corporation was formed under the title of "The Proprietors of the Boston Theatre," with a capital stock of $125,000, which corporation has continued to exist down to the present day. John E. Lodge was elected its first president. The list of the stockholders at that time contains many noted Boston names and is given here in full: W. Amory, William T. The formal transfer of the property from the old corporation to the new one was made on October 9, 1858. On January 4, 1859, that portion of the property which included the Melodeon Hall, next door south of the theatre, was sold at public auction. It was situated on an irregularly shaped lot of land, 55 feet front by 176 feet deep, containing 9354 square feet, and was sold with the restriction that no theatrical entertainments should be given in the Melodeon. The property was bought by Charles Francis Adams and is still in possession of his estate. As the Gaiety Theatre and afterward the Bijou Theatre were constructed on these premises, it would seem that the restriction was no longer in force.

For the season of 1858-59 Thomas Barry was again manager, with J. P. Price as assistant manager. An extraordinarily strong company was engaged, including Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Davenport, Edwin Adams. Charles Bass, George Holland, Dan Setchell, F. J. Horton, W. H. Curtis, Cunningham, Lingham, N. Davenport, Selwin, Reed, J. Julia Dean Hayne was the first star, opening on September 20 and remaining two weeks. On Tuesday, September 28, she presented "The Duke's Wager," a play by Fannie Kemble Butler.

Strakosch's Italian Opera Company came on Tuesday, October 5, with Pauline Colson, Teresa Parodi, Amalia Patti

dio, Ettore Barili, Nicola Barili, and Marcel Junca. They sang "La Traviata," "Lucrezia Borgia," "The Daughter of the Regiment," and "Il Trovatore," giving but four performances.

William E. Burton began on October 11 a two weeks' season, in which he played "Dombey and Son," "A Serious Family," "Wanted, 1000 Milliners," "The Breach of Promise," "The Toodles," "Blue Devils," "The Dutch Governor," "The Mumny," "David Copperfield," "Twelfth Night," and "John Jones." Charles Fisher and Miss Hughes accompanied Mr.

Burton. When "David Copperfield" was given, the programme allotted the parts of the Micawber twins to Master Wragg and Miss Dummie, they evidently being doll babies.

Edwin Booth commenced a three weeks' run on October 25. On November 1, 1858, he played Macbeth for the first time in Boston, Edwin Adams being the Macduff. On November 12 he essayed Romeo for the first time here, the Juliet being Mary Devlin.

Formes, Brignoli, Florenza, Tamaro, Dubreuil. Weinlich, Barattina, Quinto, Coletti, and Lorini. The first Saturday night performance on record in this theatre was on Christmas night, December 25, 1858, when Laborde sang in "Norma."

"The Corsican Brothers" had its first Boston presentation Thursday, January 6, 1859, with E. L. Davenport and Edwin Adams in the cast.

On Saturday evening, January 8, Robert Stoepel's symphony "Hiawatha" was performed for the first time in public, with an orchestra of fifty and a chorus from the Handel and Haydn Society, the soloists being Mrs. I. I. Harwood, Harrison Millard, and J. Q. Wetherbee. Matilda Heron (Mrs. Robert Stoepel) recited extracts from Longfellow's poem.

"The Corsican Brothers" was continued for the week of

J. C. Trowbridge

January 10. E. L. Davenport had a benefit on January 14, when "The Love Chase" was played in conjunction with "The Corsican Brothers," and Morris Brothers, Pell and Trowbridge's Minstrels and Cowbell-o-gians appeared "after their concert is over in School Street."

"The Cataract of the Ganges" was produced on January 17, 1859, with the stud of horses from James M. Nixon's circus, and ran six weeks, closing on February 26, which date also ended Mr. Barry's lease of the theatre. After that time he remained three years as agent, letting the house to any manager who wished to rent it, and at times hiring it himself for some special engagement.

The first Wednesday matinee ever given in the Boston Theatre took place on January 26, 1859, the play being

THE SEASON OF 1858-59

"The Cataract of the Ganges," and the receipts being $596.90.

James Pilgrim had a benefit on Saturday evening, February 12, 1859, this being the first dramatic attraction to play on a Saturday night. The beneficiary was seen as Con O'Grady in "Americans Abroad"; Edwin Adams played Jere Clip in "The Widow's Victim," and gave imitations of famous actors; Henrietta Lang danced a character dance; Lon and Billy Morris and Johnny Pell rendered a comic banjo trio; F. J. Horton appeared as Paddy Miles in "The Limerick Boy," and the company played "Faint Heart Never Won Fair Lady."

In the latter part of February the auditorium was floored over level with the stage and several balls were given, the first being that of the Boston Light Infantry, familiarly known as "The Tigers," the date being February 28. This was followed by the Mount Vernon Ball on March 4, the Firemen's Military and Civic Ball on March 18, and a Grand Juvenile Ball on March 23.

Johnny Pell

Mr. Barry reopened the theatre on April 5 with a spectacular production of "Faust and Marguerite," which ran four weeks with slight interruptions.

On April 25, 1859, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Davenport took a benefit, when, in addition to "The Merchant of Venice,"

"Our American Cousin" was played for the first time here,

Dan Setchell as Madame Vanderpants

E. L. Davenport being the Asa Trenchard and N. T. Davenport the Lord Dundreary.

Mrs. Barrow returned to the theatre for two nights, playing "Retribution" and "The Love Chase" on April 28 and "King Rene's Daughter" and "She Stoops to Conquer" on the 29th.

On Wednesday evening, April 27, Dan Setchell was the beneficiary, "Paul Pry" and "Our American Cousin" being the plays. In the latter Mr. Setchell was seen as Asa Trenchard in the first act, Lord Dundreary in the second, and Binney the butler in the third. E. L.

Davenport assumed the rôle of Asa Trenchard in the second and third acts, while N. T. Davenport was the Dundreary of the first and third, and W. H. Curtis played Binney in the first and second.

W. E. Burton opened on May 2 and played a week and a half in his comedies. On May 9 and 10 he appeared as Christopher Crookpath in "The Upper Ten and Lower Twenty," auother version of the French original of "The Streets of New York,"

Italian opera eame again on Thursday, May 10, the principals being Laborde, Gazzaniga, Phillips, Ghioni, Stefani,

At Thomas Comer's benefit on Saturday evening—it being the law that Saturday evening performances must close by eleven o'clock—the bill was so long that the farce of "Box and Cox," with which E. L. Davenport and Edwin Adams were to close the programme, was played in its entirety in about five minutes and the curtain descended on the minute of eleven, Mr. Barry being so eager to keep within the limits of the law that he himself gave the curtain signal. Earlier in the evening Annie Clarke made her first appearance in this theatre, playing in "Mr. and Mrs. Lillywhite" with Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert and G. D. Chaplin.

CHAPTER VIII

THE SEASON OF 1859-60

No regular dramatic company was engaged for the season of 1859–60. The time was filled by combinations, the theatre at times being closed for a week or more. The season opened on October 3 with two weeks of Italian opera, the principals being Adelaide Cortesi, Madame and Signor Gassier, Amalia Strakosch, Pauline Colson, Brignoli, Stigelli, Marcel Junca, Amodio, Quinto, and Miller. Signor Muzio and Maurice Strakosch were the musical directors, Theodore Thomas leader, Amati Dubreuil stage-manager, and Mr. Hensler chorus-master. "Il Poliuto" was the opening piece and the only novelty. At the farewell matinee on October 15, "La Traviata" and the final duet of "La Favorita" were given. Henry Squires made his Boston début as Alfred in the former piece and Miss Abby Fay, "the eminent Boston cantatrice," sang "Caro Nome del Mio Cor."

The Ravel Family appeared under Thomas Barry's management on Tuesday, November 1, and remained seven weeks. The members of this troupe were Gabriel and François Ravel, Maria Hennecart, Marietta Zanfretta, Young America, the Martinetti Family (Julian, Philippe, Ignatius, Mme. Martinetti, and Master Paul), Paul Brilliant, Lina Windel, the Lehmans, and others. Their last performance was on Saturday afternoon, December 17.

On December 20, 1859, the auditorium having again been floored over, a grand ball was given by the Second Battalion of Infantry, Gilmore's Band furnishing the music. Promenade concerts were also given by Gilmore's Band on the afternoons and evenings of December 21 and 24.

THE SEASON OF 1859-60

On January 2, 1860, the name of the theatre was changed to the "Boston Academy of Music," which title it retained for nearly three years. This was to bring it into line with the Academies of Music in New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, all large theatres, built for operahouses. The great chandelier was installed and was first shown to the public on January 2, 1860, the announcements stating that it was "the largest ever used in any theatre, either in this country or in Europe." It was made by Cornelius & Baker of Philadelphia and placed in position by their agents, N. W. Turner & Co. of Boston.

Adelina Patti

Italian opera opened on the above date with Pauline Colson, Adelina Patti, Mme. Strakosch, Stigelli, Brignoli, Marcel Junca, Susini, Ferri, and Dubreuil. Adelina Patti made her Boston début in "Lucia di Lammermoor" on Tuesday evening, January 3, 1860. This opera season lasted five weeks. Concerts were given on the Sunday evenings, Rossini's "Stabat Mater" being sung on January 8 and Donizetti's "The Martyrs" on the 15th. The concert of January 22 introduced no oratorio, but "The Creation" was given on the 29th. "Sicilian Vespers" and "Saffo" were the novelties of the season.

Mr. Barry had a benefit on Thursday evening, February 2, when the following artists volunteered: Pauline Colson, Amalia Strakosch, Stigelli, Amodio, Marcel Junea, Mrs. Barrow, Mrs. Davenport, Emily Mestayer, E. L. Davenport, Dan Setchell, A. W. Fenno, W. Reynolds, and Mr. Bates.

A company headed by Mrs. John Wood and Joe Jefferson opened on February 6 and remained two weeks, playing "The Unequal Match," "The Loan of a Lover," "Jenny Lind," "Somebody Else," "The Invisible Prince," "A Roland for an Oliver," "Fortunio," "The Rough Diamond," "All That Glitters Is Not Gold," and "Mischief Making." The other members of the company were Emily Mestayer, Miss Gimber, A. H. Davenport, Harry Pearson, Harry Russell, and Messrs. Munro, Wall, and Kingsland.

Beginning March 5, 1860, Cooke's Royal Amphitheatre played an engagement of five weeks, the principal performers being the Hanlon Brothers, Ella Zoyara, James Robinson, Joe Pentland, and W. Cooke. The Hanlons were at that time the foremost gymnasts in the world, being bona fide brothers and six in number, though William did not appear here at this time owing to an injury from which he was suffering. Ella Zoyara was in reality a man named Omar Kingsley, who mystified audiences all over the world by appearing as a female rider. The deception was kept up when he was off the stage and it was a long time before the truth about his sex was made public. Being a man, he could perform feats impossible to women, and his equestrianism often created a positive furore. Two equestrian spectacles, "The Field of the Cloth of Gold" and "The Field of the Cloth of Gold" and "The Bronze Horse," were produced during this engagement. In the middle of the last week the name of the company was suddenly changed to "Nixon's Troupe of Equestrians, from Astley's Royal Amphitheatre, London."

On April 23 "Evangeline," by the author of "Geraldine," was presented, with Miss Bateman, "the Renowned Child-Artiste," as the star, and ran one week, the company including George Jordan, C. Kemble Mason, H. Pearson, N. Davenport, T. S. Cline, Mrs. C. Hale, and Dan Setchell.

Henry W. Fenno had a benefit on May 10, with these volunteers: Mr. and Mrs. Henri Drayton, Wyzeman Marshall, Thomas Barry, David Hanchett, Fanny Mowbray, Dan Setchell, J. P. Ordway, F. I. Kent, W. J. LeMoyne, E. Thompson, N. T. Davenport, M. W. Fiske, L. F. Rand, Laura LeClaire, W. H. Danvers, Oriana Marshall, F. S. Finn, Mrs. Harwood, Mrs. Barry, Lizzie Emmons, J. C. Dunn, Mrs. Maria Rainforth, Prof. Harrington, Mrs. F. I. Kent, Mrs. Marshall, C. F. Jones, Augusta LeClaire, Caroline Howard, O. H. Chenery, F. C. Hudson, C. Eaton, G. Eaton, and F. Chaplin.

Lawrence Barrett, who was then billed as L. P. Barrett, took a benefit on May 19, when "The Hunchback" and "The Irish Captain" were played.

Beginning May 23 the Cortesi Italian Opera Company from Havana gave six performances, the principals being Cortesi, Gazzaniga, Phillips, Miss Montmorency, Signora Garofli, Musiani, Tamaro, Amodio, Susini, Rubio, Nanni, Barili, and Bellini.

On Tuesday, June 12, Mr. and Mrs. Henri Drayton had a benefit, giving "Never Despair" and "Love's Labour's Lost," the Draytons playing all the parts in both pieces. Señor Oliviera, violinist, appeared with them.

On June 20 the Cortesi Opera Company reappeared for seven performances, the artists at this time being Madame Fabbri, Frezzolini. Phillips, Cortesi, Amodio, Musiani, Barili, Rubio, and Bellini. The operasiven were "Nabucodnosor," "Lucia," "Ernani," "Rigoletto," "Il Trovatore," and "Saffo."

Prof. Anderson, the Wizard of the North

Nearling Jours,

THE SEASON OF 1859-60

Professor Anderson, "the Wizard of the North," a clever magician, opened on July 4, and remained until August 3. For the last three days of his stay he was seen as Rob Roy McGregor in the opera of "Rob Roy." Brookhouse Bowler, Aynsley Cook, and members of Professor Anderson's family sang in his support, and the programme announced that "all the available dramatic talent in Boston had also been retained," the company including Mr. Le-Moyne, Mr. Sheridan, and Mr. Lennox.

The Cadet Zouaves, under the command of Colonel Ephraim Elmer Ellsworth, an organization of young men from Chicago who far outshone all other military companies of that time in soldierly appearance and perfection of drill, gave exhibitions in the theatre on the evening of July 24 and the forenoon of July 25, 1860. Mr. Barry made a speech at the performance of July 24 saying that the audience of that evening was the largest which had ever assembled within the walls of the Boston Theatre. The service uniform of the Zouaves consisted of small tasseled caps without visors, short embroidered jackets, baggy short breeches, and high leggings over their shoes. Louis James, afterward the leading man of the theatre, and now a Shakespearian star, was a member of the Zouaves. Colonel Ellsworth was killed early in the Civil War at Alexandria, Virginia, by a man named Jackson, from the flagpole of whose house the Colonel had hauled down a Confederate banner.

CHAPTER IX

THE SEASON OF 1860-61

The season of 1860-61 was opened by the Ravels, who occupied the theatre with their pantomimes for three weeks, beginning on August 8.

Mr. and Mrs. Henri Drayton appeared on September 17, 19, 21, and 22, the two performers giving the entire entertainment of sketches, impersonations, and songs.

A season of Italian opera lasting only one week began October 1, the singers being Cortesi, Adelaide Phillips, Musiani, Manni, and Amodio. The operas were "Il Poliuto," "The Barber of Seville," "Il Trovatore," and "La Traviata."

The great event of the season was the grand ball given in the theatre on October 18 to the Prince of Wales, now King Edward VII of England. The decorations were more elaborate than ever before, and the Melodeon next door was used as a supper-room, a door having been cut through the solid brick wall to enable the dancers to reach the hall without going into the open air. The Prince was a young man then, with the same magnetism and charm of manner which have made his popularity certain in every country that he has visited. His coming at that time did a great deal toward cementing the friendship between this country and Great a part of the state of the stat

THE SEASON OF 1860-61

Britain, for it created a great good feeling, and the Prince of Wales Ball is perhaps the most important event that has ever taken place within the walls of the Boston Theatre. While the decorations were still in position two promenade concerts were given on October 19 and 20.

On October 24 a Vox Populi Concert was given under the management of Henry C. Jarrett, this being his first appearance at this theatre, where he afterwards became manager. A Vox

C. W. Couldock

Charlotte Cushman as Romeo

Populi Concert was one at which each person attending had an opportunity to vote for one of the rival candidates for the presidency, Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas.

Charlotte Cushman began a four weeks' engagement on November 28, being supported by C. W. Couldock, John Gilbert, George Pauneefort, Harry Pearson, Viola Crocker, Lizzie Emmons, Mrs. John Gilbert, and Mrs. Thomas Barry. She played "Henry VIII," "The Stranger," "Simpson and Co.," "Guy Mannering."

Isabella Hinckley

Stigelli

"Macbeth," and "Romeo and Juliet." At this time, in addition to her customary female rôles, she played Cardinal Wolsey in "Henry VIII" and Romeo in "Romeo and Juliet."

Spaulding and Rogers's Circus opened on February 4, 1861, for four weeks, presenting the spectacle, "Tippoo Saib," for two weeks, "The Merchant's Steed of Syracuse" for the third, and "Mazeppa" for the fourth.

Another season of Italian opera began on March 11 and lasted four weeks, the principals being Colson, Phillips,

THE SEASON OF 1860-61

Isabella Hinckley, Kellogg, Brignoli, Susini, Stigelli, and

Barili. The operas were "Martha," "Lucia," "Il Giuramento," "The Masked Ball," "Ernani," "Linda," "Rigoletto," "The Jewess," "La Sonnambula," "Don Giovanni," "The Barber of Seville," and "I Puritani." Clara Louise Kellogg made her first Boston appearance at this time, the date being March 19, 1861, and the opera, "Linda di Chamouni."

This was the shortest season the theatre has ever known, as only sixteen weeks in all were played, and the doors closed on April 6. The approaching war had probably much to do with the condition of the business, as the first gun of the Rebellion was fired only six days after the final performance.

CHAPTER X

THE SEASON OF 1861-62

The season of 1861-62 opened with a company under the management of James M. Nixon with Edwin Forrest as a stock star, supported by John McCullough, Mark Smith, J. H. Allen, Thomas Barry, Mrs. Farren, Mrs. Gladstane, and Mrs. LcBrun. Mr. Forrest played but three or four times each week, the intervening performances being given by Julia Daly (Mrs. Wayne Olwyne), a diaelct actress who played "The Female American Cousin," "The Irish Emigrant Girl," etc.,

THE SEASON OF 1861-62

and by Señorita Cubas and Señor Ximenes, who appeared with Miss Daly and in musical farces of their own. This engagement lasted eight weeks, during which time Mr. Forrest was seen in "Damon and Pythias," "Hamlet," "King Lear," "Virginius," "Jack Cade," "Macbeth," "Pizarro," "The Gladiator," "Metamora," "William Tell," "Richard III," and "The Lady of Lyons."

Henry W. Fenno had a benefit on November 19, 1861, on which occasion Thomas Barry played Shylock in a scene from "The Merchant of Venice," Mark Smith and other members of the company played "The Old Guard," George Pauncefort and his pupil Annie L. Brown were seen in "The Little Treasure," Cubas and Ximenes danced, and the Dyer Zonaves of Roxbury gave an exhibition drill.

Isabella Cubas

Carlotta Patti

Carlotta Patti was first heard here in concert on the afternoon of November 6,1861, other concerts being given on the afternoon of the 9th and the evening of the 10th. Harry Sanderson, the pianist, was one of the supporting company.

Italian opera was heard the week of November 25, the artists being Kellogg, Hinckley, Strakosch, Comte-Bochard, Brignoli, Susini, and Dubreuil. On the evening of November 28, 1861, it was announced that Captain Wilkes and the officers of the San Jacinto had accepted an invitation and would be at the opera that evening, the first appearance of Madame Comte-Bochard. This was the time that Captain Wilkes had brought to Boston for imprisonment in Fort Warren the Confederate envoys, Mason and Slidell, whom he had taken by force from a British vessel, the Trent, thereby nearly forcing this country into war with England. For the final Saturday matinee of the opera it had been announced that the fourth act of "Il Trovatore" would be given, together with the whole of "Lucrezia Borgia" and of "Les Noces de Jeannette." On the day of the performance, however, there was an apology in the programme which stated that by mistake the music of the "Miserere" had been sent to New York, and consequently that selection could not be given. This seems strange in these days when the musician who did not know the "Miserere" by heart would be a curiosity.

Charles and Alexander Hermann

George, William, and Alfred Hanlon

THE SEASON OF 1861-62

Hermann the magician came on December 2 and remained three weeks. This was Charles, the uncle of the later-known Alexander Hermann, who traveled with him at that time as assistant.

Goodwin and Wilder's Circus opened on December 23 and played two weeks with indifferent success, it being a peculiar fact that a circus performance on a stage has never drawn well in Boston, although a circus in its own tents is a most powerful magnet.

On January 13, 1862, the same company presented "The Cataract

Joseph Jefferson

of the Ganges," having as an added attraction the Hanlon Brothers, George, William, and Alfred, who were featuring

Mme. Varian

William Hanlon in Zampillaerostation. This elongated word was coined by James Lingard, the manager of the Bowery Theatre, New York, and simply means a performance on the flying trapeze. The grace and dash of Mr. Hanlon in this wonderful act, which was then entirely new, created a marked sensation at the time. As no net was used beneath the trapeze, the danger was much greater than nowadays, and the fearlessness of the handsome young athlete added decidedly to the attraction of the feats.

Henry C. Jarrett brought from New York a wonderful coterie of artists who had been playing at the Winter Garden. They opened on February 17, 1862, and remained two weeks. The leading actors were William Wheatley, J. W. Wallack, E. L. Davenport, Mark Smith, Thos. Placide, Mrs. Barrow, Julia Irving, Agnes Cameron, Mrs. J. W. Wallack, Mrs. Barry, and Mrs. Vincent. For the second week J. H. Hackett was added to the company. The plays were "The School for Scandal," "London Assurance," "Julius Cæsar," "Hamlet," "Jane Shore," "The Dramatist," "Werner," "Black-Eyed Susan," "Wild Oats,"

"Henry IV," "The Rivals," "The Merry Wives of Windsor," "Perfection," and "Speed the Plough." On March 3 John E. Owens played Solon Shingle in "The People's Lawyer."

Italian opera was heard for the fortnight beginning March 31, with concerts on Sundays, April 6 and 13. The principals were Kellogg, Elena D'Angri, Hinckley, Mme. Varian, Brignoli, Susini, Ypolito, Barili, Cubas, and Ximenes. There were no novelties in their repertoire.

On April 21, Henry C. Jarrett brought another remarkable

Adah Isaacs Menken and Alexandre Dumas

company for a four weeks' stay, including John Gilbert, William Wheatley, E. L. Davenport, John E. Owens, G. C. Boniface, L. R. Shewell, Chas. Barron, Ed. Lamb, Mrs. W. C. Gladstane, Emma Taylor, Mary Wells, Mrs. Skerritt, and Mrs. George Ryer. This company was seen in comedy only, the offerings being "The Rivals," "Money," "The Heir at Law," "The Poor Gentleman," "Wild Oats," "London Assurance," "A Cure for the Heartache," "Speed the Plough,"

"The Inconstant," "The Toodles," "Married Life," "Black-Eyed Susan," "The School for Scandal," "She Stoops to Conquer," "The Happiest Day of My Life," "Mr. and Mrs. Lilly white," "The Serious Family," "Sweethearts and Wives," "The Love Chase," "The Rough Diamond," "The Tragedy Rehearsed," "The Hunchback," and "The Road to Ruin,"

Adah Isaacs Menken

Mrs. Barrow was added to the company on May 6.

On May 21 "Maebeth" was played by the Avon Dramatic Club, assisted by Mrs. Farren, for the benefit of the Massachusetts Soldiers' Fund. The title rôle was taken by James Bogle, proprietor of a local hairdressing establishment and manufacturer of Bogle's Hyperion Fluid.

For Thomas Comer's benefit, on June 20, "The Poor Gentleman" and "The Loan of a Lover" were played.

Henry W. Fenno, the former treasurer, died during this season and a benefit was given on July 30, 1862, for his widow and children. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Barry and G. G. Spear presented "The Victor Vanquished"; an elegiac address, written by B. P. Shillaber, was read by W. H. Smith; "Delicate Ground" was played by E. F. Keach, J. A. Smith, and Lizzie Emmons; Adah Isaacs Menken was seen in "Lola Montez, or Catching a Governor," in which she danced a pas seul from "La Giselle"; Professor Harrington ventriloquized; James Pilgrim offered "The Limerick Boy"; and musical and terpsichorean artists filled out the bill. This was the only appearance of Adah Isaacs Menken in the Boston Theatre. She was born of French and Spanish parents in New Orleans in 1835, her maiden name being Dolores Adios Fuertes. She first married Alexander Isaacs Menken, a musician, her successive husbands being John C. Heenan, the prize-fighter, R. H. Newell, the humorist (Orpheus C. Kerr), and James Barclay. She had a brilliant and varied career, both here and in Europe, where she fascinated Alexandre Dumas, the French novelist. She wrote a book of poems entitled "Infelicia" and died in Paris, where she lies in the Jewish cemetery at Montparnasse, the inscription on her tombstone at her own request being "Thou Knowest."

CHAPTER XI

THE SEASON OF 1862-63

At the beginning of the season of 1862-63 J. M. Nixon was billed as manager, the opening attraction being the Ravel Family, who were featuring "Young America" in a flying trapeze performance, their stay being for three weeks. "Young America" was a pretty and daring youngster, whose real name was John H. Haslam. By one of those strange turns of the wheel in theatrical life, he has been for several years associated with the Hanlon Brothers as stage-manager and pantomimist, so that the first and second exponents in America of the flying trapeze afterward became business associates. The Ravels were supported by a small dramatic company, consisting of Thomas Placide, G. G. Spear, I. L. Barrett, H. Lampee, Mrs. Barry, Viola Crocker, Mrs. Flood, and Mrs. Nourse.

Italian opera, with Carlotta Patti, Borchard, Strakosch, Brignoli, Amodio, and Dubreuil, filled the week of October 6, the operas being "Lucia," "Il Trovatore," "La Sonnambula," "Lucrezia Borgia," and "I Puritani."

Thomas Comer had a benefit on October 17, 1862, when among other attractions Abijah L. Thayer offered banjo and vocal eccentricities, "for this time only under any circumstances, and for the first time in seven years."

On November 24, 1862, Edwin Booth returned to Boston

after his European sojourn and began a four weeks' engagement, a company having been engaged for him by Orlando Tompkins, who thus began his first connection with theatrical business, although he had been previously a stockholder in the corporation. The name of the establishment was changed back to the Boston Theatre, which name it has fortunately retained of the Grand Opera Company in February and March, 1863, when it was again called the Academy of Music. Edwin Booth's company included W. H. Smith, H. F. Daly, J. J. Prior, J. W. Lanergan, Owen Marlowe, Chas. Walcott, Jr., T. E. Owens, Wilkins, Davis, Browne, Russell, Arthur, Keene, Everett, Francis, Mrs. Julia Bennett Barrow, Emily Mestayer, Mrs. Florence, Minnie Foster, and Miss Anderson. The plays were "Hamlet," "Othello," "Romeo and Julia Company of the Park of the P liet," "Richelieu," "The Lady of Lyons," "The Merchant of Venice," "Katharine and Petruchio," "The Apostate," "The Iron Chest," "Richard III,"

"Much Ado About Nothing," and "Don Cæsar de Bazan."

Edwin Forrest followed on December 22 for two weeks, J. H. Hackett playing Falstaff in "Henry IV" and "The Merry Wives of Windsor" at the performances when Mr. Forrest did not appear. The company comprised John McCullough, William Wheatley, George Becks, J. G. Burnett, J. Taylor, J.W. Collier, W. H. Leake, Germon, Post, Cartland, Mrs. H. P. Grattan, Kingsland, Carroll, Sinclair, Miss Clara Day, Mrs. J. II. Allen, Madame Ponisi, and Mrs. LeBrun. Forrest's plays were "Jack Cade," "Metamora,"

"The Gladiator," "Richelieu," "The Broker of Bogota," "Richard III," "Macbeth," and "King Lear."

The Grau Italian Opera Company began on February 9 a six weeks' engagement, during which for the last times the theatre was called the Academy of Music. The principals were Kellogg, Lorini, Moreni, Cordier, Strakosch, Brignoli, Susini, Amodio, Maccaferri, and Stockton. "Dinorah" had its first Boston production on February 12, 1863, with Angelina Cordier as prima donna. Rossini's "Stabat Mater" was brought out on Sunday, March 1.

Wyzeman Marshall became manager of the theatre on Monday, March 23, 1863, his first venture being Paul Juignet's Company of French Comedians who stayed one week, presenting during that time "Camille," "La Joie Fait Peur," "Le Portier," "Le Piano de Berthe," "Margot," "La Pluie et le Beau Temps," "La Rose de St. Fleur," "Le Feu au Couvent," "Pascal et Chambord," "Risotte le Millionaire," "Une Caprice," and "La Corde Sensible." The business done by this attraction was the smallest ever known in this theatre, a matinee drawing but $12.50.

Carl Zerrahn

The Hernandez-Ravel Troupe followed on March 30 for three weeks. There were in reality no Ravels in this company, which was headed by A. M. Hernandez, a skilled guitar-player and clown, who at times played on fourteen different instruments. The other members were Mlle. Galetti, Marietta Zanfretta, Marietta Ravel, Misses J. and M. A. Lehman, Tophoff, A. Grossi, F. Siegrist, A. Lehman, Henry Moreni, and J. C. Franklin.

Carl Zerrahn gave a concert on Sunday, April 12.

Madame Anna Bishop and Gilmore's Band were heard on April 19.

Mrs. Barrow's "Great Comedy Combination" opened on

W. J. LeMoyne

April 20, 1863, and remained two weeks, playing "Town and Country," "The Rough Diamond," "The School for Scandal," "Money," "Speed the Plough," "The Rivals," "The Lottery Ticket," "London Assurance," "Wild Oats," "Uncle Frizzle," "John Bull," "Don Cæsar de Bazan," "She Stoops to Conquer," "The Stranger," and "The Wonder." The company consisted of Mrs. Barrow, Mary Carr,

Mrs. Sedley Brown, Rachel Johnson, Mrs. E. L. Davenport, Mrs. H. Chapman, Mrs. Biddles, Miss M. Newton, George

Vandenhoff, William Rufus Blake, Sam Emery, F. E. Aiken, William Scallan, W. J. LeMoyne, J. Duff, W. H. Curtis, J. Biddles, N. D. Jones, Parker, and Wyatt. William Rufus Blake died suddenly during this engagement, his last rôle being Sir Peter Teazle on April 21, 1863.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence began a Mrs. D. P. Bowers two weeks' engagement on May 4, presenting "Dombey and Son," "Mischievous Annie," "The Young Actress," "Shandy Maguire," "A Lesson for Husbands,"

THE SEASON OF 1862-63

"The Knight of Arva," "Temptation," "The Returned Volunteer," "Thrice Married," and "The Poor of Ireland."

"The Colleen Bawn" received its first Boston presentation on May 11, 1863, with W. J. Florence as Myles na Coppaleen. As the Florences were compelled by previous engagements to leave the city, and as the play had made a great success, it was continued the week of May 18, with William Wheatley as Myles.

Gottschalk

Mrs. D. P. Bowers commenced a three weeks' engagement on May 25, playing "The Mystery of Audley Court" all of the first week, the other two being given up to "The Hunchback," "Plot and Passion," "Love's Sacrifice," "The Lady of Lyons," "The Stranger," "Lucretia Borgia," "Ingomar," "Katharine and Petruchio," and "Camille."

Emily Thorne was seen the week of June 15 in "The Little Treasure," "The Governor's Wife." "The Daughter of the Regiment," "Nine Points of the Law," and "The Unequal Match." On June 16 she also appeared as the Goddess of Liberty and sang "Shout for our Glorious Banner," with words by Charles Gayler and music by Mollenhauer. Miss Thorne was a daughter of Charles R.

Thorne, Sr. She first married George Jordan, the actor, and afterward John Chamberlin, the hotel proprietor of Washington and Old Point Comfort. She was a beautiful woman, good looks being a not uncommon attribute in the Thorne family.

On June 22, 1863, Wyzeman Marshall had a benefit, when among other attractions were seen the Young Campbell Minstrels. This was a semi-amateur organization, whose members played under assumed names. One of the end men was called Billy Train, but he has since become famous as William H. Crane, the well-known comedian. Another member is now A. B. White, for several years past the manager of Austin and Stone's Museum in Boston. A third one was Charley Sutton, who, after a successful career as a black-faced comedian, became Hugo Bunth and originated the grotesque team of Bunth and Rudd, who set all Europe and America laughing at their eccentricities.

THE SEASON OF 1863-64

Por the season of 1863-64 Wyzeman Marshall was the manager, with J. G. Hanley for stage-manager, and the following company: W. H. Curtis, N. T. Davenport, Alvin Read,

C. M. Davis, F. O. Savage, F. C. Baker, J. L. Sandford, W. H. Whalley, William Scallan, William Jeffries, J. Biddles, E. Barry, J. Taylor, C. Somerville, W. H. Hamblin,

Johnson, Sylvester, Malvina, Amelia, Ellwood, Swindlehurst, Florence, Lees, and Kendrick. F. Suck was leader of the orchestra, Charles Witham, scenic artist, and John M. Ward, ticket-agent. James H. Hackett was the first star. In his one-week engagement, beginning August 24, 1863, he was seen in "Henry IV," "The Merry Wives of Windsor," "Rip Van Winkle," and "Monsieur Mallet."

Mr. and Mrs. Florence followed for four weeks of their repertoire, the play for the week of August 31 being "The

Daniel E. Bandmann

Death Fetch," in which was introduced the famous Ghost Illusion for the first time in America. Their customary repertoire followed for the other three weeks.

On Saturday evening, September 26, 1863, Charlotte Cushman and Joseph Proctor played in "Macbeth" for the benefit of the Sanitary Commission.

Isabella Cubas, supported by W. H. Edgar, followed for another four weeks, opening on September 28 in "The French Spy," They also presented "Narramatta," "The Wizard Skiff," and "The Flying Dutchman," Cubas playing Vanderdecken in the last-named piece, a character that is now exclusively acted by men.

Daniel E. Bandmann made his Boston début on Saturday evening, October 24, 1863, as Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice," for one night only.

Edwin Booth began on October 28 a five weeks' engagement in his customary tragic repertoire.

Camilla Urso

THE SEASON OF 1863-64

Camilla Urso, the young violinist, made her appearance in concert on Sunday, November 6.

Maggie Mitchell's first appearance in this theatre took place on Monday, November 30, 1863, when she began an engagement of five weeks, presenting "Fanchon," "Margot," "Little Barefoot," "The Pearl of Savoy," "Petite Marie," and "Katty O'Sheal." "Petite Marie" was written for her by a Boston gentleman and was played on December 28 and 29, and apparently never again.

Italian opera opened on January 4, 1864, with a performance of "Ione, or the Last Days of Pompeii," which was then seen for the first time here. The company included Kellogg, Medori, Stockton, Sulzer, Mazzolini,

Maggie Mitchell

Biachi, Bellini, and Lotti. Among other novelties "Faust" was first seen here on January 14, 1864, with this cast:

Marguerite Siebel Martha Faust Mephistopheles Valentine Clara Louise Kellogg. Henrietta Sulzer. Fannie Stockton. Mazzolini. Biachi. Bellini.

There was a full military band on the stage, and the orchestra was enlarged by the addition of the Mendelssohn Quintette Club and other musicians.

Edwin Forrest opened on February 1 for six weeks of his repertoire, the performances on the off-nights being given by

Mazzolini

Daniel E. Bandmann, who presented "The Merchant of Venice," "Narcisse," "Othello," "Hamlet," and "Richelieu."

Madame Methua Schiller, supported by John McCullough and Mr. Forrest's company, played "Lorlie's Wedding" on March 2 and 5.

On Saturday evening, March 12, 1864, Count Joannes was seen in "Hamlet," supported by the Countess Joannes (Melinda Jones) and the Forrest company. He was an actor whose true name was George Jones. Though at first a man of much promise, he developed eccentricities which later caused him to be laughed at and guyed unmercifully whenever he appeared. His wife was an actress of much power. Their daughter, Avonia Jones, married the English tragedian, G. V. Brooke.

The Italian Opera Company returned on March 14, with the same artists as before. On March 22 Laura Harris made her début in "Lucia." Brignoli and Hermanns also joined the company, which remained two weeks.

Vestvali opened in "Gamea, or the Jewish Mother," on March 30 and remained three weeks, playing also "The Duke's Motto" and "Lucretia Borgia."

Mme. Methua Schiller

THE SEASON OF 1863-64

Maric Zoe, the Cuban Sylph, began a fortnight's engagement on April 18, playing "The French Spy," "The Wizard

Skiff," and "Esmeralda." During her engagement "The Broken Sword" was twice used as an afterpiece. It was in this play that the expression "Chestnut" originated. One of the characters tells a story about something which happened under a chestnut tree. During the course of the play he repeats this story several times, each time making it a different species of tree, such as walnut, maple, etc., and each time he is corrected by an oppo-

Count Joannes

manner it came about that "Chestnut" meant an oft-told story. Its use was confined to the theatrical profession for fully twenty years, but it was eventually adopted by the general public and it has now taken its position among recognized American slang words.

Grand opera in German began a two weeks' season on May 2, the artists being Johannsen, Frederici, Canissa, Himmer, Habelmann, Hermanns, and Steinicke. This was before the days of the Wagner vogue and the German repertoire was much the same as the Italian, site character, who interrupts him with "Chestnut." In this

"Martha," "La Dame Blanchc," "Faust," "Der Freischütz," "The Merry Wives of Windsor," "Stradella," "Don Juan," and "Fidelio" being sung.

Maggie Mitchell played a second engagement, opening on May 16 and remaining four weeks.

On Wednesday evening, June 22, 1864, P. S. Gilmore began a series of promenade concerts, the music for which was to be furnished by Gilmore's Band and a large orchestra, his intention being to continue the concerts throughout the summer, the admission being twenty-five cents, or five tickets for one dollar.

On Monday, June 27, the newspapers contained the following advertisement:

regulate a price for their services at promenade concerts, and by the action of that body a larger sum being demanded than any manager can well afford to pay, the undersigned regrets that he is compelled for the present to abandon his intention of giving promenade concerts every evening during the summer months and to adopt the plan of giving entertainments at such times only as he can offer such irresistible attractions as will give promise of sufficient patronage to enable him to meet the increased demands of musicians and all others whose services he may require. He is now endeavoring to effect an arrangement with parties whose appearance cannot fail to create a sensation, and trusts that he may be enabled to make a more definite announcement in a few days.

P. S. GILMORE.

Major Pauline Cushman

This was not the only time in the history of the theatre when an engagement was brought to a sudden end by the excessive demands of the musicians. History repeated itself in December, 1896, when the orchestra of the Imperial Opera Company caused the theatre to be closed, thus throwing themselves and many others out of employment. On neither occasion were they accorded the sympathy of the theatre-going public.

Si Smith and Dan Simpson

Having secured the services of Major Pauline Cushman, a lady who had won fame as a spy for the Northern army in the South, Mr. Gilmore began on July 11 another engagement, which lasted two weeks. In addition to the concerts by Gilmore's Band, Major Cushman delivered short lectures on her war experiences, including a court-martial and sentence to death, which was happily averted by her escape to the Union lines. Dan Simpson and Si Smith, the veteran drummer and fifer of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, also appeared, as did Georgie Dean Spaulding, the harpist.

Junius Brutis Booth.

CHAPTER XIII

THE SEASON OF 1864-65

Beginning with the season of 1864–65, the real managers of the Boston Theatre were Benjamin W. Thayer and Orlando Tompkins, although it was not until 1873 that the firm name of Thayer and Tompkins was placed at the head of the play-bills. Their first acting manager was Henry C. Jarrett, who retained the position for two years, being followed by Edwin Booth and John S. Clarke for one year, who in their turn were succeeded by Junius Brutus Booth, Jr., who remained six years. When Mr. Shewell was engaged, the heading of the programme read, "Thayer and Tompkins, Proprietors. — L. R. Shewell, Manager." It is worthy of note that, although the theatre had seen some years of disheartening business before the advent of Messrs. Thayer and Tompkins, it has never had a losing season from 1864 to the present time. This is a record that is very difficult to equal anywhere in the world.

The company for 1864-65 included E. L. Davenport and J. W. Wallack as stock stars, other members being George H. Clarke, Benjamin G. Rogers, J. M. Dawson, George Karnes, George Clair, Shirley France, C. H.

George H. Clarke

Wilson, Rose Eytinge, Rachel Noah, Minnie Monk, Ada Monk, Annie L. Brown, Mrs. Marshall, and Harriet Orton.

James E. Murdoch

The dramatic season began on August 29 with the regular company supporting Messrs. Davenport and Wallack in "The Lady of the Lake," which was followed by "Hamlet," "The Iron Mask," "Macbeth," "Amasis, or the Last of the Pharaohs," "Richard III," "Still Waters Run Deep," "The Forty Thieves," "The King of the Commons," "Oliver Twist," "St. Mare," "Black-Eyed Susan," and "The Honeymoon."

Leonard Grover's German Opera Company began a four weeks' season on October 10, with Johannsen, Frederici, Rotter, Formes, Habelman, Hermanns, and Tamaso.

On Sunday evening, October 23, the oratorio of "Moses in Egypt" was presented.

On the afternoon of October 27 a benefit was given to Morris Brothers, Pell, and Trowbridge, whose minstrels had been burned out of their own house. Buckley's Serenaders, a rival organization, were among the first volunteers for the benefit.

On November 7 the National Sailors' Fair took possession of the theatre, the auditorium being floored over as for a ball.  $\Lambda$  door was cut through to the Melodeon and permission was obtained from the proprietors of the Boston Theatre to have theatrical entertainments given in that hall during the continuation of the fair.

Mrs. D. P. Bowers appeared for three weeks, commencing November 24, in her repertoire, to which she had added "East Lynne" and "The Jewess of Madrid."

On December 12, 1864, and for the following three weeks the William Warren Comedy Company, in which were William Warren, Charles Barron, Emily Mestayer,

Rachel Noah as the Najad Queen

William Warren

Josie Orton, and others, played a long list of comedies and farces. They also returned on May 29, 1865, for another fortnight.

James E. Murdoch, the tragedian, gave dramatic and patriotic readings on six successive Sunday evenings, beginning December 26, 1864.

The only engagement of Italian opera was one of four and a half weeks, which opened on January 2, the principals being Carozzi-Zucchi, Kellogg, Morenzi, Lotti, Susini, Massimiliani, Bellini, and Jennie Van Zandt. "Don Sebastian" was the only new opera.

Laura Keene

"Enoch Arden" was produced on February 1, with J. W. Wallack as Enoch Arden and E. L. Davenport as Philip Ray.

A spectacular production of "The Naiad Queen" was given on February 7 and continued until March 11, with William Gomersal as Schnapps, Mrs. Gomersal in the soubrette rôle, and Rachel Noah as the Queen.

For the weeks of March 13 and 20 Laura Keene played "The Workmen of Boston" and "Our American Cousin." It was in the latter play that the same star was appearing three weeks later at Ford's Theatre in Washington, when President Lincoln was assassinated in a private box in the theatre by John Wilkes Booth.

Edwin Booth commenced here, on March 29, an engagement which was cut short on April 14 by the assassination of Lincoln by the tragedian's brother. On that historical evening Mr. Booth was seen in "The Iron Chest" and "Don Cæsar de Bazan," and without having heard of the sad tragedy had retired for the night in his room at the home of Orlando

Tompkins in Franklin Square, where he was visiting at the time. On the following morning his colored valet, an old family servant, greeted him with, "Have you heard the news, Massa Edwin? President Lincoln done been shot and killed." "Great God!" said the horrified tragedian, "who did that?" "Well, they done say Massa John did it,' replied the negro. And in this wise was America's greatest actor informed of the tragedy which was to cast so deep a gloom over his life for years to come. Fearing that the public might be incensed against Mr. Booth on account of his brother's crime, Mr. Tompkins immediately had his house draped in mourning for the martyred president, and that same afternoon he accompanied the actor on the train to New York, whither he was hastening to comfort his grief-stricken mother, who resided in that city. Mr. Jarrett ordered the theatre draped in black, and issued an address to the public, exonerating the actor from any knowledge of the conspiracy.

Jennie Van Zandt

This address was supplemented by a letter from the Reverend George II. Hepworth, who was an intimate friend of Edwin Booth, and who knew of the great respect and admiration the tragedian always held for Abraham Lincoln.

The theatre remained closed until April 20, when Mr. and Mrs. Barney Williams began an engagement of two and a half weeks in their repertoire of Irish and Yankee plays.

Mrs. D. P. Bowers then played three weeks in her usual rôles, with Charles Barron for her leading support. A dramatization of Oliver Wendell Holmes's "Elsie Venner" was presented for the last week of the engagement, which closed on May 27.

On Saturday evening, May 20, 1865, Frank Dwight Denny, a local amateur, gave a praise-worthy rendition of the title rôle in "Hamlet," supported by the regular company. He appeared again the following season and was confidently expected by his friends to win a name on the stage, but his early promise was unfulfilled, and he did not long remain upon the boards.

The William Warren Comedy Company appeared for two weeks beginning May 29, presenting comedies and farces, with Carrie Augusta Moore, the Concord Skater, doing her specialty between the pieces.

Thursday, June 1, 1865, having been appointed by the Governor as a Day of Fasting and Prayer, the occasion was celebrated in the theatre by the recitation by Rachel Noah of a Monody written by W. T. W. Ball, on the Death of Abraham Lincoln. The remainder of the evening's bill consisted of "Paul Pry" and "Grimshaw, Bagshaw, and Bradshaw," with Miss Moore in her skating act between the plays.

The week of June 12 was devoted to benefits.

Gilmore's Band was heard on Sunday evening, June 18, and the Highland Cadets of Worcester gave exhibition drills on the afternoon and evening of June 21, thus ending the season of 1864-65.

This was followed by one week of German opera in which were heard Johannsen, Rotter, E. Naddi, Hermanns, Habelmann, Himmer, and Pierre Bernard.

Beginning February 5, 1866, Caroline Richings sang one week in "The Enchantress," supported by Peter Richings and the regular company of the theatre.

On April 14 H. A. M'Glenen

Joseph Proctor as the Jibbenainosay

The audience derived much pleasure from his personation, but did not behave in the most orderly manner. His success was not sufficiently complete to encourage him to adopt the stage as a profession.

John E. Owens next played a nine days' engagement in "Solon Shingle," "The Happiest Day of My Life," and "The Live Indian," closing May 12, being followed by three weeks of Maggie Mitchell in her well-liked plays.

On Saturday evening, May 19, 1866, Joseph Proctor was seen as the Jibbenainosay in "Nick of the Woods," an extremely melodramatic rôle, which his talent was able to lift to the verge of tragedy, when less gifted actors might have seemed ridiculous in the part.

Lucille Western came on June 11

"Macbeth," "Jane Shore," and "Oliver Twist." She was supported by E. L. Davenport and J. W. Wallack, and their rendering of the last-named play stands in theatrical history as one of the most dramatically horrifying performances ever seen on any stage. Miss Western was the Nancy Sykes, Wallack the Fagin, and Davenport the Bill Sykes. The murder scene sent ladies in the audience into fainting fits and drove strong men from the theatre, unable to endure any longer the effect of their terribly natural acting. The season closed on June 29 with a performance of "The Man with the Iron Mask," in which J. W. Wallack was seen in one of his greatest rôles.

THE SEASON OF 1866-67

Por this season Edwin Booth and John S. Clarke were billed as lessees, with J. B. Booth as acting and stage manager, although Thayer and Tompkins were in reality the powers behind the throne. Charles Koppitz was again musical director, George Heister scenie artist, and W. P. Prescott was the machinist, a position which he continued to hold until the month of June, 1901, when he retired from active business. The company consisted of Frank Mayo, Charles R. Thorne, Jr., Louis Aldrich, Walter Leman, Frank Hardenberg, H. L. Bascombe, George Allen, W. St. Maur, W. F. Burroughs, F. Woodhull, S. H. Forsberg, J. P. Reynolds, E. M. Leslie, T. Bingham, R. Noah, Susie Cluer, Annie Winslow, Mrs. E. M. Leslie, Mrs. J. H. Browne, Mary Carr, Mrs. Marshall, and Mrs. Robinson.

The season opened on July 30, 1866, when the Buislay Family began a three weeks' stay with a variety performance, Henry Agoust the juggler being one of the features.

The stock company opened on August 20 and presented the following plays during the next fortnight: "Money," "The Loan of a Lover," "Ingomar," "The Romance of a Poor Young Man," "Jack

Edwin Booth returned to the Boston stage on Monday, September 3, 1866, making his first appearance after his retirement on account of the assassination of President Lincoln, in the tragedy of "Othello," in which he played the title rôle. He was received by a crowded house, who greeted him with a spontaneous and long-continued burst of applause which affected him almost to the point of breaking down. The east on that occasion was as follows:

John S. Clarke, who was a brother-in-law of Mr. Booth, having married his sister Asia, and who was also his partner as lessee of the theatre, followed with a two weeks' engagement, in which he played "Everybody's Friend," "Toodles," "Babes in the Wood," and "Nicholas Nickleby." In the latter play he was seen as Newman Noggs, a part which showed his talents to great advantage.

Adelaide Ristori and her Italian company came on October 29,

1866, for a period of two weeks, presenting "Medea," "Mary Stuart," "Elizabeth," "Judith," "Phædra," "Macbeth," "Adrienne Lecouvreur," and "Pia di Tolomei." Ristori appeared but four nights and Saturday matinee of each week, the regular company of the theatre playing on Wednesday and Saturday evenings in "The Ticket of Leave Man," or in "The Octoroon." A two weeks' season of Italian opera followed, with men Poch, Ronconi, Mazzolini, Antonucci, Baragli, and Signor Ronconi.

Kellogg, Fannie Stockton, Minnie Hauck, Natali Testa, Car-

John Brougham opened for four weeks on November 26, in "Flies in the Web," "The Captain of the Watch," "His Last Legs," "Playing with Fire," "David Copperfield," the burlesque of "Columbus," "Dombey and Son," "A Bull in a China Shop," "The Irish Lion," and "The Irish Emigrant."

J. B. Roberts next appeared for a fortnight, beginning December 24, in "Faust and Marguerite,"

"The Iron Chest," "The Corsican Brothers," and "Richard III." Lawrence Barrett followed for a single week in "Rosedale," "Hamlet," and "The Lady of Lyons."

Another two weeks' season of Italian opera began on January 14, 1867, with the same principals as before.

Mrs.D. P. Bowers followed for a fortnight in her usual rôles, supported by J. C. McCullom. For novelties she introduced "A Wife's Secret" and "Adrienne."

On February 11 "The Streets of New York" was revived by Frank Mayo and the regular company. This play ran for four weeks and was followed by three weeks more of the same actors in "Ours," "The Colleen Bawn," "Brian Boroihme," "The Idiot Witness," "The Three Guardsmen," "The Veteran," and "Waiting for the Verdict." "Ours" was billed as "An Entirely New and Original Comic Drama, written by T. W. Robertson and Artemus Ward, Esqs." Its opening date was Monday, March 11, 1867. When Lester Wallack offered the piece

J. B. Roberts

on Tuesday, March 8, 1870, it was called "The Military and Comic Drama, written by T. W. Robertson and Artemus Ward, Esqs.," but when Mr. Wallack revived it here on October 24, 1872, it was billed as "Robertson's Grand Military and Comic Drama." What connection Artemus Ward had with the piece does not appear, as present editions of the play make no mention of his name.

On Saturday evening, March 9, Brignoli and Adelaide Phillips were heard in "The Barber of Seville," and on Saturday evening, March 30, J. H. Budworth was seen in "Rip Van Winkle."

Another week of Italian opera followed with Parepa,

Phillips, Brignoli, and Ferranti in the leading rôles of "Il Trovatore," "Norma," "The Barber of Seville," "Lucia," and "Don Giovanni."

Edwin Booth was seen again in tragic rôles from April 8 to May 18, inclusive. Ristori and her Italian company played "Mary Stuart" on Friday, April 25, and "Elizabeth" at Saturday matinee, April 26. On Saturday evening, May 18, 1867, the German tragedian, Bogumil Dawison, played the part of Othello in his native language, while Edwin Booth as Iago and the supporting company of the theatre spoke their lines in English.

"The Naiad Queen" was presented on May 20 for a three weeks' run, Mr. and Mrs. William Gomersal, Agnes Perry, Mrs. Frank Mayo, and Annie Chester the dancer being featured.

T. Maguire and Professor Risley's Imperial Japanese Troupe opened on June 17 and remained two weeks.

Fox's Great Combination Troupe came for the week of July 1, closing the season. The performers were James Pilgrim, Johnny Pierce, Ellen Coleen, J. M. Mortimer, Denny Gallagher, Mlle. La Rosa, Johnny Forbes, Frank Wood, Mons. Albert Boldy, Julia Price, Alice Siedler, J. C. Stewart, James Quinn, and R. M. J. Siner. The afterpiece was "Lucretia Boards-Here."

THE SEASON OF 1867-68

THE new Selwyn's Theatre, on Washington Street near Essex, named for its manager, John H. Selwyn, formerly a scenic artist at the Boston Theatre, opened early in the season of 1867–68, and Charles Koppitz left to become the musical director of that establishment, taking his entire orchestra with him. He was succeeded by Napier Lothian, who remained in the same position from that time until May, 1907, this being the longest period that any leader of orchestra has ever retained a like position in this country. Mr. Lothian, whose father before him was a musical director, was a young New Yorker who went across the plains to California to seek his fortune in the golden days of '49, sleeping out of doors while on the journey and roughing it generally, as did all the gold-seekers of that day. In California he met and married a young English girl named Rivers, who had come to this country with the Viennese Ballet Troupe. Their union was blessed with many children, among them being several sons who have won position in the managerial departments of the theatrical profession.

After a stay of several years on the Pacific slope Mr. Lothian returned East with the San Francisco Minstrels. His first Boston engagement was in 1862 with the Morris Brothers' Minstrels at their cosy little theatre on Washington Street, nearly opposite Milk Street. When the Morris Brothers built the Continental Theatre on Washington Street, near Harvard Street, he was transferred there and remained at that house until his engagement at the Boston Theatre.

Theatre, whose residence is in Brookline. Rachel Noah and Susie Cluer both reside in Boston, though neither has been seen of late years upon the boards. Louisa Morse has long been identified with the part of Aunt Tilda in "The Old Homestead," and was seen in that rôle as recently as the autumn of 1906, she being the last one of the company of the season of 1867–68 to be seen in this theatre. Harry Bascombe is in the Edwin Forrest Home in Philadelphia, where he has been an inmate for more than twenty years, his being the longest stay that any individual has ever made in that institution. J. Scott was in private life Mr. S. J. Willis. He did not long remain before the public, but engaged in the banking business and at last accounts was living in Milton.

Dan Maguinnis, who made his first appearance with the company that season, afterward became the leading comedian of the theatre and a great local favorite. He began his stage career with the Morris Brothers as a tenor singer. Unfortunately losing his voice for a time, he became stage carpenter and gallery door-keeper until his throat had become fully rested, when he returned to the stage as an actor. His rise was rapid, as he had talent, humor, and intelligence. As a matter of interest his first contract in this theatre is shown here.

Charles R. Thorne, Jr., remained here for a number of years, eventually going to New York, where for many seasons he was acknowledged to be the foremost leading actor in America.

Louis Aldrich also continued here for several years. He later became a star in Bartley Campbell's play of "My Partner," which brought to him considerable fame and so much money that he was able to retire on a competency some years before his death, which occurred in 1901.

Mrs. Booth also went to New York and held high position among the leading actresses of the metropolis until her retirement from the stage some seasons ago.

Julia Gaylord, whose name came at the foot of the list, afterward became a singer, and going abroad rose rapidly to the position of prima donna, singing principal rôles

The season opened on September 2, 1867, with the Irish comedian Edmund Falconer in "Innisfallen, or the Man in the Pit," he being supported by Kate Reignolds (now Mrs. Erving Winslow) and the regular company of the theatre.

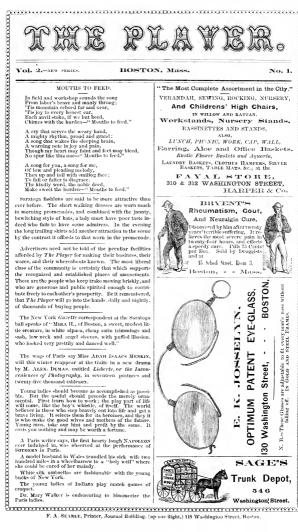

On September 16 Mrs. Jean

Davenport Lander commenced a two weeks' stay in "Elizabeth," presenting "Mary Stuart" on the Friday evening of the second week. Her leading man was James H. Taylor, who in his turn should not be confounded with W. James Taylor, who held a like position with Madame Janauschek.

On Saturday evenings, September 21 and 28, "Fanchon, the Cricket" was presented with Jennie Gourlay as Fanchon, W. J. Cogswell as Landry Barbaud, and George Becks as Didier Barbaud.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence came September 30 for three weeks in "Caste," "Handy Andy," "The Yankee House-keeper," "The Young Actress," "The Irish Lion," "Thrice Married," "The Returned Volunteer," "Shandy Maguire,"

"Kathleen Mavourneen," "Born to Good Luck," "Mischievous Annie," "Ireland As It Was," "Lord Flanigan," "The Irish Emigrant," and "A Lesson for Husbands."

The Hanlons, with what would now be called a vaudeville company, occupied the theatre for three weeks from October 21, that being also the date of the opening of Schwyn's Theatre.

Adelaide Ristori with her Italian company was seen for one week in "Marie Antoinette," "Mary Stuart," and "Elizabeth," her first performance taking place on November 11. She also came for another week in the same season, beginning on Monday, May 11, 1868, when "Sister Teresa" was added to her repertoire.

There were four seasons of opera during the year, one in Italian, one in English, and two in French. The first presented La Grange, Adelaide Phillips, and Brignoli in "Il Trovatore," "Norma," "The Barber of Seville," "Martha,"

"Lucretia Borgia," "Don Giovanni," "Lucia di Lammermoor," and "La Favorita," opening on November 18 and continuing two weeks. This was followed on December 2 by four weeks of English opera by Caroline Richings, Mr. and Mrs. Seguin, S. C. Campbell, William Castle, Laura Waldron, and Pierre Bernard in "Martha," "La Sonnambula," "The Bohemian Girl," "Maritana," "Linda di Chamouni," "Crown Diamonds," "Cinderella," "The Daughter of the Regiment," "Norma," "The Rose of Castile," "Faust," and "Fra Diavolo."

On December 30 II. L. Bateman introduced for the first time the noted French singer Tostée in "La Grande Duchesse," which ran for three weeks; and on May 18 the French Opera Company from New Orleans, with Mlle. Lambèle as prima donna, sang "Orphée aux Enfers," "La Belle Hélène," and "La Grande Duchesse," one week being given to each opera.

Robert Johnson and Nellie Germon were seen for the week of January 20 in "The Heart of a Great City," and on the following week the regular company presented "The Streets of New York."

The White Fawn Ballet

Henry Ward Beecher's drama, "Norwood," had a single representation on the afternoon of January 25, 1868.

The spectacular feature of the season was "The White Fawn," which was given a production far beyond anything ever before seen in Boston and which would be greatly above the average of to-day. James Lewis and Annie Kemp Bowler were especially engaged as principals, while an entire ballet troupe was imported from Vienna solely for this engagement. "The White Fawn" opened on February 10, 1868, and continued for eleven weeks. Although it was a noteworthy success at that time, the play has never been revived in this city.

The cast of "The White Fawn" was:

King Dingdong Prince Leander Lord Twaddledum Count Trinculum Abdella King Salmon Queen Saffronelle Princess Graceful Finetta Princess Aika Aqualina Ruby James Lewis, Mrs. J. B. Booth,
George Atkins.

The name D. J. Doublesitte signified that D. J. Maguinnis doubled the part with that of Count Trinculum. When an actor played two parts another name than his own was put down for the inferior rôle, and sometimes considerable ingenuity was shown in devising the new names. D. J. Canduit was often used, or D. J. Twoparts. C. F. Loon and R. F.

Runnion were favorite names for the programme writers, both being taken from "Macbeth," — "The devil dann thee black, thou cream-faced loon," and "Aroynt thee, witch, the rumpfed runyon cried." Ordinarily, though, an actor's name was simply turned end for end, as D. J. Maguinnis and M. J. Daniels. This caused some slight misapprehension when James Lewis and Louis James were both members of Augustin Dalv's company in New York.

Rev. E. S. Gannett

The weeks of April 27 and May 4 were given up to benefits and performances by the regular company. Madame Ristori returned for the week of May 11. The New Orleans French Opera Company, headed by Mlle. Lambèle, filled the weeks of May 18, 25, and June 1. Promenade concerts under the management of Signor Brignoli and P. S. Gilmore were given on the evenings of July 1 and 2. The Great Haselmeyer,

Rev. Dr. Putnam

"Chief Escamoteur and Enchantemagian Musicale to the King of Prussia, Preceptor of Hermann, and Inventor of the Famous Goblin Drum," gave an "Entertainment Magique et Musicale" the week of July 13. Mrs. O'Donovan Rossa gave readings from the poets on the evening of Tuesday, July 21, 1868. The Montgomery Light Guard, "of Boston, Massachoo," gave an exhibition drill on July 27, assisted by Gilmore's full band of thirty-six pieces.

During the winters of 1867, 1868, and 1869, the Suffolk Conference of Unitarian and other Christian churches rented the theatre for successive Sunday evenings and held religious services, at which the following elergymen officiated: George H. Hepworth, J. M. Manning, George W. Briggs, S. H. Winkley, E. E. Hale, Robert Collyer, E. S. Gannett, W. H. Cudworth, George L. Chainey, Rufus Ellis,

THE company remained about the same, with the addition of James Lewis, H. A. Weaver, J. P. Keefe, Ambrose Leonard, Shirley France, and Helen Tracy. Shirley France afterward married Rachel Noah, the juvenile lady of the company. J. B. Sullivan became the property-man and remained in the theatre until 1887, when he was succeeded by J. F. Sullivan, who continued from that time until June, 1901. The two Sullivans were not related. The season opened with the stock company in "A Flash of Lightning"

Edwin Booth came on October 4 for a month's stay, playing his usual rôles. On November 3, 1868, "Macbeth" was presented, with Mr. Booth as Macbeth and Madame Fanny Janauschek as Lady Macbeth, she speaking German, while Mr. Booth and the supporting company rendered their rôles in English.

On November 4 the regular company produced Boucicault's drama, "After Dark," an added feature for the second week being Leotard, the originator of the flying trapeze. Leotard appeared at but two performances, it being announced the next day that he had sprained his ankle at rehearsal. His apparatus was packed up and he sailed for home, but the supposition was that as the flying trapeze was no longer a novelty, he did not make the hit that he had expected, and showed his disappointment in this manner. "After Dark" ran two weeks and was followed by another week of the regular company in "The Lancashire Lass," with Mr. Thorne as A Party by the Name of Johnson.

Mrs. Lander, supported by James H. Taylor and George Beeks, was next seen for two weeks in "Elizabeth," "Marie Antoinette," "Mary Stuart," and "Macbeth.'

On the evening of Saturday, November 28, 1868, "Romeo and Juliet" was given, with Mrs. Scott-Siddons as Juliet and Mrs. F. B. Conway as Romeo. Mrs. Scott-
